PREFACE.

IT is impossible for me adequately to thank the kind friends who have aided me in my work, and I feel that any expression of gratitude on my part is a poor return for their services.

My best thanks are due to the owners of the several works described, for the use of their valuable possessions, particularly to Mr. Chalmers of Westburn, Mr. Alexander Walker, Merchant, Aberdeen, Dr. Webster of Edgehill, and Mr. Arthur D. Morice, Advocate in Aberdeen.

I sincerely thank the Keeper of the Library of the Faculty of Advocates, Edinburgh, the Librarians of the Universities of Aberdeen, Edinburgh, and St. Andrews, of the Signet and New College Libraries, Edinburgh, for their courtesy in aiding me in my researches. I am greatly indebted to Mr. John Young, Jr., Assistant-Librarian of the University of Glasgow, for the careful collations of works in the Library there. Many of the most valuable additions and corrections were supplied by him. From the officials of the British Museum, especially Dr. Garnett and Mr. J. P. Anderson, I have always received the greatest attention. During my short stay in Oxford, the Librarian and Assistant-Librarians of the Bodleian did everything in their power to help me. To the late Mr. Henry Bradshaw, Librarian of the University of Cambridge, I owe more than I can find words to express. Encouragement at the commencement, direction while in progress, and commendation bestowed in unmeasured terms—all this I received from the friend whose opinion I valued above all others.

I most cordially thank Mr. A. M. Munro, City Chamberlain's Office, for the numerous references and transcriptions from the Council Registers and Account Books of the Burgh of Aberdeen. Many particulars regarding our early printers could not have been recovered by me without his valuable assistance. I am indebted to Mr. P. J. Anderson for many interesting facts in connection with the Theses, and for extracts from the records of the University of Aberdeen. I have to thank Mrs. Robertson for permission to use the information contained in the MS. Biographia Abredonensis, written by her husband, the late Dr. Joseph Robertson. The extracts from that source are duly acknowledged throughout the work. I am also indebted to my friend Mr. A. W. Robertson, Public Librarian, Aberdeen, who has read the proofs, and given me many valuable suggestions. The vast resources of the Library at Haigh Hall were most generously placed at my service by the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, and many valuable bibliographical works were lent by him.

In conclusion, I thank everyone who has given me the smallest scrap of information about the Aberdeen Printers, and the products of their press.

J. P. EDMOND.

THE ABERDEEN PRINTERS.

CHAPTER I.

EDWARD RABAN.

A HISTORY of Scotch printing in general would be out of place in a work such as this, which only treats of the rise and progress of the art in one of the towns in the kingdom. Nevertheless, it will be useful, for comparison of dates, to state the leading facts of the introduction of the typographic art into the northern half of the kingdom.

Briefly, they are these:—In 1507, King James V. granted a licence to Chepman and Myllar, and they continued to print so far as is known until 1510. Other printers followed in regular succession, except for a period of about 26 years, during which our knowledge is at fault. Thomas Davidson, who printed in 1541, was succeeded by John Scot, who first extended the privilege of a press to the Scottish provinces, by introducing printing to St. Andrews in the year 1552. Then followed Robert Lekpreuik, who was the first printer in Stirling, Thomas Bassandyne, Alexander Arbuthnot, John Ross, Henry Charteris, Thomas Vautrollier, and Robert Waldegrave, bringing us to the commencement of the seventeenth century. By that time the press had grown a power in Scotland, and the single line of succession of printers a thing of the past.

Although St. Andrews and Stirling thus early appear as places whence books were issued, yet the reasons for this are to be found in the exigencies of the times ; and it was really not until the seventeenth century that printing spread to the provinces of Scotland.

That Aberdeen received the boon of a press so late as 1622 has often appeared strange to many. But if we consider the rude state of the country, the extreme poverty of the people, the difficulties of carriage, and the small chance of being able widely to disseminate the products of the press, we rather have reason to feel astonishment at the enterprise and activity of its first printer, Edward Raban.

It is very much to be regretted that the facts connected with Raban's life are very few, and to many they must appear unimportant. It may be well to premise that nothing here has been conjectured, but that instead, the bare facts of the case, so far as they have been ascertained, are set forth in all their simplicity.

Upon the authority of the Parson of Rothiemay,* we are informed that Edward Raban was an Englishman by birth ; and, had we been disposed to doubt this source, the matter is at once set at rest by the imprint of one of his own books, in which he styles himself

* Gordon's Scots Affairs. Vol. III., p. 238.

Edwardus Rabanus, Anglus. * Like so many more of his countrymen who followed the same profession, he came north in search of a suitable field in which to exercise his craft. The first town he stayed in was Edinburgh, where, in 1620, he printed at the sign of the A. B. C., in a house at the Cowgate Port. Here he printed, so far as has been yet discovered, only one book, a theological treatise by Archibald Symson, Minister at Dalkeith, a writer who revels in unfolding hidden meanings in the sacred number seven. †

Raban cannot have continued long in Edinburgh, for in the same year, 1620, he removed to St. Andrews. It is very much to be regretted that the municipal records of this ancient city are very deficient—those for the years during which Raban worked there are lost.

The University of St. Andrews appointed him as their printer, ‡ and we would naturally expect to have some notice of the appointment in their books. But a search in their archives has been fruitless, no mention being made of him or of any other printer; indeed, before that period and for long after, the minutes are confined to strictly academical matters.

In St. Andrews he placed the same sign over his printing office as in Edinburgh. The house in which he worked we have been unable to identify, but the imprint of one of his books states that it was in the South Street of that ancient and beautiful city. §

There is little to narrate about his career in St. Andrews. In 1621 he executed some work for Dr. Robert Baron, who continued a patron to the last; and who, in all likelihood, exercised considerable influence in bringing about Raban's removal to Aberdeen. His residence in St. Andrews cannot have exceeded two years, for he printed in Aberdeen the King's College Thesis, which was to be disputed on the 22nd July, 1622.

It will always be a matter of uncertainty whether the authorities of the Town or of the University first invited Raban to settle in Aberdeen. We have already hinted that Dr. Baron may have been concerned, he having removed to Aberdeen, and having much influence with both the University and City authorities; but, Bishop Patrick Forbes, a prelate, enlightened and learned in advance of his day—despite his persecutions for witchcraft—must also have been a very active agent in the transaction.

Kennedy states that Sir Paul Menzies, on behalf of the Town and Bishop Patrick Forbes, obtained a patent from King James I. for a printer to exercise his calling in Aberdeen,* but we regret to say that we can find no confirmation of this statement.

The bishop's action in the matter is celebrated by Andrew Strachan, in his Panegyricus Inauguralis, in the following glowing terms:—

* Kennedy's Annals of Aberdeen, Vol. I., p. 175.

* "Antistes noster [Patricius Forbesius] . . . cum cerneret prælum esse Bibliothecæ Φυτευτήριον, divinam illam et Jovis cerebro dignam Artem Typographicam, (quæ nunquam ante saltus Caledoniæ et juga Grampia salutarat) huc tanquam de Cœlo devocavit : atque hâc prærogativâ effert se Academia nostra super alias omnes nostrates. In tantis frigidibus nec prælum sudare cessat, idque haud absque operæ pretio. Non solum enim excuduntur hic Libri, qui omnium Scholarum usibus deserviant ; sed etiam ii, qui cùm genium habeant, nostris scholis earumque rectoribus ornamento sunt : id que Typis splendidis, qui lucem illustrissimarum Regionum ferre possunt." †

The bishop remained Raban's friend until the death of the former in 1635, when his decease was mourned by his printer in verses to which we shall allude later on.

The earliest notice we have of Raban in Aberdeen is his appointment by the Town Council as their printer on the 20th November, 1622, when a salary of forty pounds Scots was ordered to be paid to him yearly, and every scholar attending the Grammar School had to pay him eightpence quarterly, which sum was to be collected with the school fees. It will be seen from the minutes of the meeting that the benefits of this bargain were not one-sided :—

* "Our bishop [Patrick Forbes] . . . when he perceived the printing-press to be a nursery of the Library, fetched hither as if from heaven, the art of printing, an art divine and worthy the brain of Jupiter, (which never before had greeted the forests of Caledonia and the Grampian mountains) : and by this privilege our Academy is exalted above all others in this country. Nor mid the rigours of the region does the printing press cease to toil, or toil without reward for its work. For not only are Books issued here which are useful to all Scholars ; but also those which while they have talent are a distinction to our schools and to their rectors ; and that in a splendour of Type, which can bear the light of the most illustrious Regions."

His appointment as printer to the University seems to have been simultaneous with his coming to Aberdeen, for, in the imprint of a book printed in the same year, he bears the honourable title "Universitatis Typographus."†

The sign under which he printed was changed on his removal to Aberdeen. The "A. B. C." which we found over his printing house in Edinburgh and St. Andrews, gave place to the more pretentious sign of "The Townes Armes," and this continued to be the sign-board of the Aberdeen printers for at least one hundred years.

One of Raban's earliest friends in his new home was the bookseller, David Melvill (the Daid Mailing of the pension minute), who appears to have befriended him from first to last. Many of the books, especially those belonging to what might be called popular literature, were printed for Melvill, who, although not the first bookseller in Aberdeen, as was long imagined, may have been the only one at that period. This trade connection was formed at once, for Melvill's name is found on several books dated 1622, the books being either printed for, or at the expense of, the bookseller. The friendship existing between them is further evidenced by the terms on which Raban rented his house from the Town's authorities. Melvill's position as a burgess must have been of the greatest assistance to the new comer, and we may well believe, from what we know of Raban's subsequent history, that without his cautioner it would have been often impossible for him to carry on his trade in the town.

The house occupied by Raban as a printing office was on the north side of Castle Street, and was a two-storied edifice. It is described as the "toun's foir hous aboue the meill mercat," and is also spoken of as a new house. Although we cannot positively assert that Raban's occupancy of this house began immediately on his coming to the town, yet, we find his friend David Melvill paying for rent in the same year.* His tenancy of the "new foir hous," at all events, commenced during the second year of his residence in Aberdeen.

The Town Council, at their meeting on the 14th February, 1623, entered into an agreement with Raban, Melvill appearing as his cautioner, and both parties signed the minute, which is as follows :—

“ 14th February, 1623.

That he continued to occupy this house during the whole of his career as a printer, may be seen from the entries in the Town's Accounts for the various years ;†

* Aberdeen Council Register, Vol. L., pp. 562-563.

† We have copied the following entries from Extracts from the Accounts of the City of Aberdeen, Miscellany of the Spalding Club, Vol. V., pp. 144-164 :—

and, that he enjoyed the same emoluments as printer to the Town and to the University, there is abundance of evidence in the Registers of the former, and in the Theses printed for the latter.

Of Raban's domestic relations up to the year 1627, we should have remained in perfect ignorance but for an entry in the Kirk and Bridge Works Accounts, dated 11th January, 1627. There we are told that "the same day Jeanett Jhonstoun spous to Edward Raban, printer bureit gratis." With this we must rest content, happy to have gleaned even this much.

That his relations with his superiors were always smooth, is not to be expected ; not even in those old times could repairs be got executed without haggling and bargaining. The new house in the Castlegate had fallen into dis-repair. Ten years had left their traces on the building. The seams of the masonry were all open, and wet percolated the walls of the printer's dwelling. A petition to the owners of the property was considered at a meeting on 2nd May, 1632, when the guardians of the Town's interests drove a somewhat hard bargain with their tenant :—

More substantial and encouraging recognitions of his services were made to the printer on the 19th June of the following year. On that day he was granted, by the Town Council, "ane hundreth and allevin pundis . . . for printing of ane buik dedicat be Doctour Barron to the counsall, and also for printing of some poiesies writtin by Mr. David Wedderburn and Mr. George Robertson."†

A passing glimpse of Raban is obtained in the Family Register of Andrew Melvin, whom we believe to be brother of David Melvill the bookseller. This Register forms part of a small quarto manuscript, now in the possession of John Anderson, Esq., London. It appears to have been used as a common-place book, and contains many curious proverbs, poems, alphabets, &c. Andrew Melvin's fifth child is thus entered, the printer being one of the god-parents:—

"Thomas was borne the 25 day of Novembere the zeir of god 1634 being the 15 day of the moone on ane Tuysday, his godfatheres were, Thomas Cargill, Thomas Andersone Alexr Gray reader, Edwart Raben printer, His godmotheres were Margrat Huisone Spous to Mr. Wm Couper, Isobell Petrie Spous to Jhone broune, cristane ross Spous to Robert Melving creistan galloway Spous to robert Annan Isobel Hendersone Spous to patrick Walker."

But a more interesting fact is disclosed in the next entry, for we see from it that Raban did not remain

* Aberdeen Council Register, Vol. LII^t., p. 53.

† Aberdeen Council Register, Vol. LII^t., p. 115.

an inconsolable widower, but, that previous to April, 1637, he had married a second time, his wife being Janet Ealhous, or Ailhous. The birth and baptism of this sixth child of Andrew Melvin is entered as follows in his Register:—

“Robert was borne the 17 day of Apryll 1637 being the 3 day of the moone on ane Mononday, His godfatheres were Robert Paull Robert Straqn Wm Reid Jhon Anderson sone to Gilbert Andersone Skipper His godmotheres were [blank in original] Spous to Jon Wobster, Margreat Straqn, Spous to the foresaid Wm Reid, Janet Ealhous Spous to edward raben printer, Isobell Melving dochter to david melving my brothere.”

The life that Raban led must have been an industrious one, as is evidenced by the number of publications that came from his press ; and, although we know that he received some assistance in discharging his duties as printer, yet, as his servant is generally spoken of in the singular, we have every reason to believe that with the help of one workman the printing establishment was conducted. In the year 1638 Raban printed a curious treatise, of which he was the author, called “The Glorie of Man, Consisting in the Excellencie and perfection of Woman,” of which we have elsewhere given some particulars.* Here we shall briefly indicate the nature of its contents. In the Epistle Dedicatorie we are told that the work was written “to vindicate and deliver myself from the imputation of Sarcastick, bitter, too loose & liberall speaches, agaynst the most noble worthie and transcendant sexe of Women, (which some knowing their own imperfect weaknesse may apprehend to be calumnies and detractive to the whole sexe) I here make humble Oblation and with all Reverence present unto your Ladiships Honorable Hands this little Treatise as a part of my studie in my wearisome Journie, this half-yeare by-past, in forraygne Countreys, Which indeed Madame I aimed for your La: the last new-years-day if distresse of weather and contrarie winds, had not hindered. But, through the mercie of God, your La: Servant being safelie arrived, I desire no more but that this Abortive may shelter itself . . . not doubting but that it shall so plead for me that by a just judgement of all your La: most glorious, noble and gracious sexe, I shall be pronounced guiltlesse quyte & free from all Aspersion, and imputation, unjustlie heretofore layd to my charge . . .”

From the above it will be seen that Raban was absent from Aberdeen during the latter part of the year 1637, and the beginning of the year 1638; but, whether the journey was undertaken for the purpose of obtaining new type or other plant, or owing to the troubles then raging, we cannot say. The writer enumerates the “Authors from whom this little Treatise hath its originall beside the holie Scriptures and Chronicles of all nations and in all languages”: they are in number fifty-three. This would indicate a large amount of reading, and the command of a considerable collection of books. There is very little originality in the book, for it is chiefly composed of quotations from various writers, grouped into chapters, of which the titles are as follows:—

- Chap. I.—Of the creation of Woman and her Perfection.
- Chap. II.—Of the fayre and goodlie Priviledges granted and given unto Women even from the Beginning.
- Chap. III.—Of the excellencie of Women whom God hath made the first Mothers of Vertue and Instrumentall Finders out of the most excellent and needful things in the world.
- Chap. IV.—Of the Valiantnesse, Boldnesse and courage of Women and of their notorious Battells; fame surpassing the engine or courage of Man.
- Chap. V.—Of sundrie good Women who wittilie and valiantly have cleansed whole Countreys and Congregations of Cruell Tyrants and Heretickes.
- Chap. VI.—Of the wonderfull goodnesse of God towardes!Man, which he hath wrought by Religious Women. And how by a woman Britayne first received the Christian Fayth.
- Chap. VII.—Of the Wisedome, learning discipline and good manners wherein Women have proven farre more excellent and perfect than Man.
- Chap. VIII.—Of women who have not only surpassed Men in poesie, but also overthrew the learned Doctors and Philosophers in disputation.
- Chap. IX.—Of the chastitie Modestie and Temperancie in Women both Wyves and Mayds; to the example of luxurious vitious and libidinous Men.
- Chap. X.—Of the great and wonderfull Wisdome in Women: to the high Glorie of God, and great Benefit of Man.
- Chap. XI.—Of the constant steadfastnesse in Women not onlie suffering cruell Tormentes but also Horrid Death for the Testimonie of Jesus Christ.

If we except the addresses of the Printer to the Reader at the end of Archibald Symson's "Heptameron," and David Browne's "New Invention intituled Calligraphia," which we have printed at length in another place,* there is no other evidence of Raban's authorship as a prose writer. As a poetical contributor to Bishop Patrick Forbes's "Funerals," we have already spoken of him; and, although we do not at all think that the "Regrate" is his only work in that way, yet, as there is no other piece to which he signs his name, we here present it to the reader :—

* See pages 4, 6-7.

But not a whit behind the best,
To shew th' affection of good Will.*

EDWARD RABAN, Master Printer,
The first in Aberdene.

In the bibliographical portion of this book considerable quotations have been made from the Almanacs printed by Raban, and it is generally supposed that these were written by him, as well as printed. We fear that he has little credit by either his prose or his verse, although the quaint conceits of the latter have tempted us to preserve what of it we could recover.

From the writing of such verses as the "Regrate" to imprisonment, there is a wide step, but we are bound to state the fact that, on Christmas Eve, 1639, Edward Raban and his wife, with another couple, were put in ward for a broil in which they had been mixed up. The case came before the Town's Magistrate on the last day of the year, when they were found guilty, and sentenced to imprisonment or a fine; but the old records had better speak for themselves:—

The printer's lot had fallen in troublous times. Next year, 1640, the General Assembly met at Aberdeen, and many things savouring of prelacy and popery had to be enquired into. Raban was commanded to appear before the Assembly to answer for a very curious charge. Several years previous to this (possibly in 1633) he had printed a Psalm Book with the Book of Common Order, or Presbyterian Liturgy, which was usually appended to the Psalter. He was accused of wilfully "manking" or shortening the prayer at the end of the book, and it was suggested that he had done this at the suggestion, or by instruction, of one of the Aberdeen ministers who were so strongly suspected of holding unsound or anti-covenanting views.* The printer pleaded that it was simply for lack of paper that he had curtailed the prayer, humbly asked pardon of the Assembly, and was dismissed with a caution. The parson of Rothiemay narrates the circumstance in his usual quaint and graphic manner:—

"The printer, Edward Raban, ane Englishman, was called upon ; . . . it was objected that he had manked ane common prayer in a new editione of the psalm booke, which some yeares befor he had printed in a large octavo. It was a forme of ane evning prayer, whence he had tackne of the conclusion for want of paper, it being the closure of the last sheete of the booke. Ther wer other coppies of that prayer readde, and they wold needs have the printer confesse that he had throwne away all that clause out of designe, or by warrant of some of the ministers of

* In the Journal of the Glasgow Assembly held in 1638, printed in the Records of the Kirk, it is recorded that, during the discussion on the Articles of Perth, "as some things were cited out of the treatise before the Psalme Booke, printed at Aberden, 1625, where prayer is made against hyreling Papists, that God would confound them, In these that are printed at Aberden, Papists are left out ; In ane uther prayer, these words, 'the Romish Idol,' are left out ;

"Then Doctor Guild, in Aberdene, desyred that the printer might macke accompt of it, who had bein the occasion of that,"—Records of the Kirk, p. 169.

Aberdeen. The printer protested solemnly that what he did was of himself, and was done for want of paper; and simply that if they wer offended, he craved them humble pardone; that he could instance that, except in that copy, he had never omitted to print the conclusion of that evning prayer in any other editione of the psalmes In meeter, and should never omitte it againe. So after a rebooke for his rashnesse in curtailing a prayer, he gott licence to be gone, without further censure.”*

Nor was this the only circumstance connected with Aberdeen printing which occurred during that Assembly's session. In 1636 the celebrated book of Canons had been printed under Dr. Robert Baron's supervision at Raban's press. The selection of Aberdeen for the production of this national work is easily accounted for. Dr. Baron was very high in favour with the King and Archbishop Laud, and was entrusted by them with the duty of editing this work, which, it was hoped, would bring about a better state of discipline in the Scottish Church. The troubled state of Scotland in general, and the great disaffection to the Episcopal Church in the capital, made it of importance that the work should be quietly carried through. This could best be accomplished by Baron's old friend the printer in his own town, and accordingly the work was executed by Raban. Dr. Baron had been taken to his rest before the Assembly met at Aberdeen, but his widow did not escape from this inquisitorial gathering. Gordon says that they gave orders to take the poor woman prisoner, and bring her to Aberdeen, “Whither she was no sooner come but she must delyver the key of her husbands librarye, that it might be searched for manuscripts and letters. Some letters wer founde wryttne by the Bishopp of Rosse, concerninge the printing of the Booke of Canons, and a timber peece of tailly du pierre, whereupon was cut the Kings armes, to be printed into the frontispiece of that booke."*

The tailly du pierre, or woodblock, is printed on the back of the titlepage of the "Canons," and is a well executed piece of woodcutting.

Spalding narrates the same circumstance, with this interesting addition, that letters were found containing orders that Raban should print in the Book of Common Order some passages of Arminianism, and it is probably on this account that the printer was brought up on the charge of "manking" the prayers.

Financial difficulties appear to have fallen upon the printer about this time, for, in one of the Registers in the Town House of Aberdeen, under date 31st March, 1641, the following entry appears, signed by him:—

Edward Raban *

This is one of the two known signatures of Raban ; the other being appended to the lease of the printing office.

In 1643 the first mention occurs of Raban having another place of business, besides the printing office in the Castle-gate, above the Meal-market. At that date, and until the close of his career, he advertised that his books are "to be sold at his Shop at the end of the Broad-gate," he having in all probability taken over the "bueith" of David Melvill, whose death occurred early in 1643.† Both of these tenements were rented by his successors over a very long period ; certainly, until 1736, and possibly later.

The death of his old friend, David Melvill, must have embarrassed the printer. It would appear from the subjoined minute that Raban, not being able to fulfil his obligation to the Town for the sum of 500 merks Scots, his cautioner's son, Robert Melvill, had to satisfy the Council by selling a certain quantity of his father's books to pay the debt. ‡

* Aberdeen Council Register, Vol. LIII², p. 798.

† The entry of his funeral in the Kirk and Bridge Work Accounts is as follows :—
"1643, Feby. 8, David Meluill, burges."

‡ 11 June 1645. There is very little known of the last years of Raban's life. We cannot even fill up the blank by stating that his press was busily occupied as in former years. The number of publications known which bear his imprint, after David Melvill's death, are so few, that the consideration is forced upon us whether or not the press stood idle during the greater part of the time between 1645 and 1649. The unsettled state of the country is shown by the very suggestive entry in the Burgh Accounts, where Raban receives "wool and ane skinn . . . to print the papers that is prined on the bristis of thes that stand on the scaffold."*

Former accounts of Aberdeen's first printer have always stated that Raban died in 1649, immediately before his successor's appointment. This has now been finally disposed of by the discovery, in the Kirk and Bridge Work Accounts, of the entry of his burial, "1658 Dec. 6, Edward Rabein at Wast dyk." This implies that on his death the printer's remains were treated with every respect ; for the spot indicated, the west wall of St. Nicholas Churchyard, is the place of sepulture of many of the most honoured citizens of Aberdeen.

There is very scanty material from which to form an estimate of Raban's character. Thoroughly practical and plain spoken he certainly was, if we are to judge from his business-like address to the reader at the end of Browne's Calligraphia, * to which allusion has already been made. His reasons for fixing the price of the book at six shillings sterling are stated with courtesy and straightforwardness. The address on "faults" at the conclusion of Symson's Heptameron, † where the reader is requested "to auoyde partialitie, judge charitable, and correct diligentlie," is both quaint and concise. His sense of humour is abundantly evidenced by the quaint conceits of his Almanacs. But further testimony of his eccentricity is afforded in the extraordinary title, "Laird of Letters," assumed by him on the imprint of Elizabeth Melvill's Godly Dream, ‡ respecting which Beloe observes, "perhaps no printer or publisher, before or since, has assumed so strange and singular a title as Mr. Raban, who scruples not to style himself 'Laird of Letters.'"

* See pages 6-7.

‡ See pages 76, 205.

One custom of the period during which Raban lived was the payment of a sum of money, termed drinksilver, on the completion of work, over and above the usual payment. There are several entries in the Burgh Accounts of money spent in this way. One states that Edward Raban and his servants received in drinksilver one pound six shillings and eight pence,* and at least once he received six shillings and eight pence to drink "at the setting of the press."† But nothing can be deduced from these entries to prove that Raban's was a dissolute life, for at those days the city purse was opened for such extravagances upon the slightest excuse, and no business of importance seems to have been transacted without a money-making.

The restrictions exacted by Raban's patrons, the City and University, must have contributed to his difficulties in his declining years. The unhappy condition of Scotland at that time, when nearly every house was divided against itself, must have pressed hard on the printer, and rendered his course by no means a clear one. Archbishop Laud's decree on printing had been anticipated in the capital of the north-east of Scotland. By this decree, of the Star Chamber Courts, passed in July, 1637, Laud provided that no book or pamphlet should be printed in England without a license from him or the Bishop of London; or, if printed at Oxford or Cambridge, without a license from the Chancellors or Vice-Chancellors of those Universities. But it is possible that Laud received the hint from the Old Aberdeen University, for in 1634 that body had requested the king's assent to certain articles, one clause of which was, "that all printers and stationers within the said Diocies [Aberdeen] be subject to the jurisdiction off the said Universitie and be sworn thereto and accounted supposto thereof." *

Whether Raban resigned, or was ejected from his office of printer to the Town and University, still remains unsolved. The City records are silent on the subject; no mention of his name is found in the registers after the minute relating to the appointment of his successor. His name occurs, however, in the Burgh Accounts for 1651-1652, where the expenditure is noted "of four marks, for the maill of ane staible in Rabin's closs, becaus the same is downe." We might conjecture from this that his long residence had caused the close or court where his printing office stood to be called by his name, but whether he continued to reside in the "closs" is not known. †

The Instructions are in three parts:—I. Grievances; II. Priviledges; III. "Our humble supplication to his sacred Majestie upon the former motives."

III., § 12 runs:—"That all printers and stationers within the said Diocies [Aberdeen] be subject to the jurisdiction off the said Universitie and be sworn thereto and accounted supposto thereof."

† In the Kirk and Bridge Work Accounts for 1679, Feby. 3rd., the funeral of "Janet Ailhous servant to Alex. Toasch," is recorded. This may have been Raban's second wife.

A printer of the same name, who worked in Grenoble, Orange, and Nîmes, has sometimes been mistaken by French bibliographers and others for Edward Raban, the first Aberdeen printer. The death of the latter in 1658 renders their identity impossible. The French Raban resided at Nîmes after that date, for some of his works printed there are dated 1660 and 1662. He then returned to Orange, where books were printed by him, dated 1674, 1676, 1678 and 1681.* These facts have only to be mentioned to prevent this question being again opened up. That any relationship existed between the naturalised Scotchman and his French namesake, we have not been able to establish.

Some remarks on the quality of Raban's printing may perhaps be looked for. His arrangement of title-pages is often very commendable, and the judicious use of woodcuts and ornamental borders delights the eye of the booklover. In other respects his work has all the unevenness and irregularity of second-rate printers of that period. His proofs must have often been very carelessly revised, as may be seen by the numerous errors in the pagination. Nothing larger than small quarto, of the size termed pot, is known as having been printed by him, if we except a few broad-sheets. With all their faults his books have been eagerly searched for by collectors; the extreme rarity of many of the works of popular literature printed by him being a recognised fact.

CHAPTER II.

JAMES BROWN.

SO very little is known of James Brown that it may be told almost in a single sentence. In the minutes of his appointment he is called the lawful son of William Browne, the Parish Minister of Innernochtie or Strathdon, in the Presbytery of Alford. Hew Scott says that William Brown removed from Glenbucket, and was admitted to the charge of Innernochtie, prior to the 24th of March, 1618, and was still incumbent on the 20th of November, 1633.* The precise terms of James Brown's appointment are as follows:—

9th Jany., 1650.

The said day the provost baillies and counsell Receavit and admittit James Browne Law^{ll} sone to Mr Wm Browne Minister at Innernochtie printer of this brugh in place of edvard Raban during the counsellis pleasr allenarlie And to the Lyk causualtie and benefite off the towne as the said edvard Raban haid the tyme bygaine. †

His work is inferior to Raban's in many respects. The greyness of the ink, and absence of good taste in the composition, have made his books far less desirable possessions than those of his predecessor. No book of the proportions of Raban's octavo Psalter, or Forbes's Funerals, has been discovered with Brown's imprint.

* Scott's Fasti, Vol. III., Part II., p. 563.

† Aberdeen Council Register, Vol. LIII^r, p. 255.

If we except his official work as printer to the Town and University, the remaining books that issued from his press are very few.

Brown held the office of printer to the Town and University until his death in 1661. We are again indebted to the Kirk and Bridge Work Accounts for the notice of his burial, which is thus recorded:—"1661, July 16, James Broune printer at the west dyke."

For a short time there appears to have been a locum tenens in the printing office. A small treatise by James Leslie, noticed at page 99, and at greater length at page 214 of this work, is the only evidence that can be brought forward to support this assertion. It has no printer's name on the titlepage. At the conclusion of the address to the reader, the author apologises for the youth and unskilfulness of the printer. This apology could never apply to Brown after having held office for eleven years. The initials F. U. are printed within a woodcut at the top of the first page of the text, and these may possibly be the first letters of the printer's name.

CHAPTER III.

JOHN FORBES and JOHN FORBES, YOUNGER.

IT may be clearly seen from several entries in the treasurer's accounts for the Burgh of Aberdeen, that the elder Forbes, who is often designated Stationer, was in Aberdeen prior to his appointment as Brown's successor. The earliest to which we can point is for 1656-1657, when a payment to Forbes is ordered of "the somme of fourscoir sexteine pund, which he advancit to Mr. Robert Patrie at Londone upon his ticket." Another mention of him in the Council Register has given rise to strange surmises. We allude to the act of council on the 29th of July, 1657, appointing "ane weekly diurnall to be sellit for the wse of the inhabitants, and John Forbes, stationer, to furnish the samen weekly." * Can this have been the earliest newspaper published in Aberdeen?

Brown does not appear to have carried on the business of stationer or bookseller conjointly with that of printer, as his predecessor Raban did during the latter part of his career in Aberdeen. None of the books printed by Brown state that they are to be sold at his shop in the Broad-gate, as in the case of so many of those bearing the names of his successors, the two Forbeses ; and, the fact of the elder Forbes being in business as a stationer so early as 1657, inclines one to think that he may have succeeded Raban in that capacity, when Brown was appointed printer. That Forbes and Brown had intromissions—one supplying the paper, and the other executing the printing—has been assumed in the case of the “Weekly Diurnalls.” But if any doubt should exist of such an arrangement, it is dispelled by the very exactly-worded statement by the treasurer of the town of Aberdeen in his accounts for 1660-1661, where payment is ordered to be made to Brown for printing Paterson’s and Menzies’ Sermons, * to Forbes for paper, and to James Miller, bookbinder, for binding the same. †

When the office of printer became vacant by the death of James Brown, John Forbes, Stationer, and his son John Forbes, who, from the first, is styled printer, made application for the appointment. Their chief difficulty appears to have been in settling with Brown’s widow, Agnes Rutherford. They complain in their petition to the council that they had purchased the printing material at a “dear rate”; and they ask for the same privileges as were held by the Town’s printers in the past. The request was granted, and an order given for the repair of the printing house, “in the roof, walls, windows, or any other parts where needful.”

* Aberdeen Council Register, Vol. LIV., pp. 364-365.

One of the earliest books printed by Forbes after his appointment was the well-known and highly-prized "Cantus, Songs and Fancies." Of this remarkable book much has been already written, and, in what we add here, we shall confine our remarks to the personal interest Forbes had in the undertaking. We attribute the authorship and conception of the work to the elder Forbes, and consider that the only share his son had in it was as a partner in the printing business. Three editions of the "Cantus" appeared, viz., in 1662, 1666, and 1682; the last after the death of the author. When the book first appeared, the Town Council of Aberdeen rewarded Forbes with one hundred merks Scots, in acknowledgment of his dedication of the work to them. In the dedication prefixed to the edition of 1666, Forbes mentions that of 1662, which he calls his "first-born," and, in very inflated language, again offers his book to the rulers of his native city. He pays the Council the very singular compliment of forming a bench "of as many Musitians as Magistrates." The address appears worthy of preservation in a foot-note, on account of its quaintness. *

RIGHT HONORABLE,

A few years ago, that I might approve my self no less an observant Citizen, than a provident Parent, being invited by the desires of some, allured by the kindness of others, and encouraged by the expectation and good hopes of the usefulness of the thing it self

When the "Cantus" was printed for the third time in 1682, certain verses were added. In the first two, Forbes addressses the Magistrates of Aberdeen as follows:—

Considering well, your HONORS hath
Much Zeal, and perfect Love
To Graces all, Who by much Faith, Obtains all Things above :

to the Place ; I did lay down my First-born as a fondling, at the feet of Your Honorable Bench, solemnly engaging, that as it received its being from BON-ACCORD, and its growth from Your Goodness, so it should period its stature with Your Pleasure. This Promise hath pressed me, that my Press might always bear the Impress of Your Vertues; and express (though in a smal type) my thankfulness, according to the laudable custom of Votaries in all Ages, after a few years growth, to represent the same to Your Sanctuary, that it may be confirmed in Your favor. For that I may confess ingenuously when I looked deliberately on this my first Mephibosheth, I offered the same as an object of pity, being so mank and maim in its chiefest parts, like a pittiful Embleme of Orpheus teared by the Thracian women, its vigor seemed to wither, its tender hands to dry up, and whole body to vanish in a consumption; had I not called a Tymous Counsel of the most Expert in this Place, who diligently turning over their old Records, and rifling the labors of their Ancestors, unanimously and so cheerfully did contribute all their pains, that now being freed of all the noxious humors that were preying on its vitals, its wants are made up, defects supplied, its dried hands received moisture, and strength diffused so thorow the whole limbs, that it dare show it self to the Publick on its own legges, if Your Wisdoms command; yea, run to the Schools to warble the Anthems of Your Liberty. Seeing it is natural to children to lisp out first their Parents names, why should it be singular? If it did so when on the Nurse breasts, why not in the flower and prime of its youth? Though it be silent, it hath a voice, and could sing its own pedigree, and the fruitfulness of its Mother Science; yea, with Strabo, Pindarus, Plutarch, Aristotle, and all Antiquity demonstrate, how much brutes, as well as men, are born obsequious subjects to this Queen, whose charming Melody was only able to enchant Barbaritie, civilize Savages, secure Societies, and so give matter to the significant Apologues of Amphion, Linus, Orpheus, and the building of the Theban walls, were it not the fear of being tedious, it would not be afraid to assert with Divine Plato, and his Followers, that the Heavenly Soul by which the Univers is animate, doth owe its Origin to this Lady; and narrate how much the great Solon, that Sun of Greece, bestowed on his Nephew, for teaching him one Saphick Tune: and how much pains the wise Socrates, though full of years, did greedily bestow upon the Lute; and how much that greatest Captain, and Magistrat of Athens Themistocles, after he had accomplished himself in all Vertue, and most of Arts, was dashed with the sharp Sarcasme of a fellow Magistrat: How can he keep men in Harmonie, and people in Concord, who hath not learned as yet to tune a Citeron? It were no difficultie to show how much the Ancients used this Science, as a remedy and amulet against all Fascinations: As the Harp of David, to alley the fury of Saul; and the greatest auxiliarie also in time of Battle, so that the famous Stratonicus did discern the courage of his Souldiers, by the musical and saliant motion of their Bodies; and therefore, bearing a Citeron in his Ensigne, did adde this motto, Adversus male canentes Cythera; as if none deserved Victory and Triumph but Musicians.

And now, seeing it hath pleased Providence in Your Wisdoms Persons, to bless the Bench of BON-ACCORD with such an Harmonious Consort, of as many Musitians as Magistrats, that all under Your Magistracie may descant on Your Labors, and Posteritie sing Your Praises to coming Ages: Admit this Poor Present to Your Acceptance; its Breath and Being depends on Your Brow, being willing to receive its Sentence from the same, whether it shal be smothered in the Birth, or view the Publick under Your Patrocinie: However, that the best Blessings and Out-bearing of the ALMIGHTY, may accompany Your Wisdoms in all Your Honorable Designs, Shall be the dayly Prayer of

YOUR HONORS

Own Servant,

John Forbes.

For Harmonie in BON-ACCORD,
 Hath been this Place Intent ;
 Yea, Grace Divine, and Musick fine,
 Your PERSONS still present.

The remaining verses eulogise the reigning monarch,
 King Charles II., "the Rod of Vice and Vertues Recompence !"

GOD SAVE KING CHARLES.

To SCOTLAND's, ENGLAND's, FRANCE and IRELAND's KING :
 Great EMPEROUR of EUROPE's Greatest ISLES :
MONARCH of Hearts and Arts, and every Thing
 Beneath BOOTES, many Thousand Myles :

Upon whose HEAD, Honor and Fortune smyles :
 About whose Brows, clusters of Crowns do spring :
 Whose Faith Him Champion of the FAITH En-styles :
 Whose WISDOMS Fame o're all the World doth Reign.

Long live KING CHARLES in all MAGNIFICENCE,
 The Rod of Vice, and VERTUES Recompence.

The dedication in the third edition is entirely new. Not content with the flattery heaped upon the Town Council in the previous edition, the author launches out in praise of Aberdeen and its rulers in most unmeasured terms. He speaks of Aberdeen as "the Sanctuary of Sciences, the Manse of the Muses, and Nurserie of all Arts." In support of the fame of the city for Music, he calls to witness "the confluence of all sorts of persons, . . . who of design have come (much like that of the Queen of Sheba) to hear the sweet chearful Psalms, and heavenly melody of famous Bon-Accord." He repeats his compliment that there were "as many Musitians as Magistrats," and finally he prays "that Bon-Accord may resemble Heaven, in an Harmonious Concord." One personal allusion made in this dedication we have been unable to interpret. The writer, referring to Aberdeen, says, "he owes his native birth-right to this famous place, (since 1576)." The only suggestion we can make is, that 1576 may have been the date of his ancestors' settling in this city. Forbes again received from the Council a sum of money, one hundred pounds Scots, in acknowledgment of his dedication. *

And to the Rest of the Honorable Counsell of the City of ABERDEEN.

RIGHT HONORABLE,

Your HONORS Servant, Having had the Good Opportunity some Years ago, at two severall Occasions, to present Your Hs. Worthy Predecessors with Patronage of this Musick-Book, of which two Impressions there are few extant: And he being again (of New) invited by the earnest Desires of some, yea, allured by the Kindness of others, and encouraged by the Expectation, and good Hopes of the Usefulness and Profitableness of the Book itself; not only to this Famous CITY, but also to all Lovers of Musick within this Nation, hath (according to his very bound Duty) presented Your Hs. with the Patronage of this Third Edition: Especially, seeing it hath ever been the chief Honor, and singular Praise of this Famous CITY, to be the Sanctuary of Sciences, the Manse of the Muses and Nurserie of all Arts: So that under Your (and Your Hs. Worthie Predecessors) prudent Patrocinie, vigilant Care, and Fatherly Inspection, so little a Plate of Ground hath yeelded very many Plants of Renown, who have alwayes Flowrished as Trees of delight both in Church and State throughout all the Corners of GREAT-BRITAIN: Yea, whose Excellency hath ever been so eminent, that to have been born or bred in ABERDEEN, hath been a great Argument and Ground, to procure promotion for any, to Places of any Profession else where: Yea, the Fame of the CITY for its admirable Knowledge in this Divine Science, and many other fine Enduements, hath almost Overspread whole EUROPE: witness the great Confluence of all sorts of Persons from each Part of the same, who of design have come (much like that of the Queen of Sheba) to hear the sweet chearful Psalms, and Heavenly Melody of Famous BON-ACCORD, whose hearts have been ravished with the Harmonious Concord thereof: If then, the ALMIGHTY hath bestowed such a Grand Blessing upon the Same, sure the Heavenly and Divine Use will much more redound to our Eternall Comfort, if with our Voices we joyn our Hearts when we sing in His Holy Place.

Venerable Bede writeth, that no Science but Musick may enter into the Doores of the Church: And see how much the Royall Psalmist, Holy King David is taken up in singing Praises to his Creator, for you shall seldom meet Him, without an Instrument in his Hand, and a Psalm in his Mouth: having Dedicated Fifty-three Holy Meeters or Psalms to his Chief Musician Ieduthum, to compose Musick to them: Yea, he was one in whom the Spirit of God delighted to dwell, for no Evil Spirit will abide to tarry where Musick and Harmony are Lodged, as when David played before Saul, the Evil Spirit departed immediately. And Luther speaking of the Power of Musick, saith, Scimus Musicam Dæmonibus etiam invisam & intolerabilem esse. We know that Musick is most Dreadfull and Intolerable to the Devils. And St. Augustine sayeth,

Several questions present themselves for solution in connection with a statement made in the address which Forbes prefixed to the third edition of the Cantus. Speaking to lovers of music, he says, "I must confess, the work as to the Musick is not mine, but for Printing and Publishing hereof, I am still ready . . . to improve my Talent." It will be observed from the titlepages of the first and second editions that Thomas Davidson, master of the music-school, was to a certain extent the that Musick is the Gift of GOD, and a Representation or Admonition of the sweet Consent and Harmony which his Wisdom hath made in the Creation and Administration of the World: And therefore its First and Chiefest Use is, for his Own blessed Service and Praise; And next, for the Solace of Men, which as it is agreeable unto Nature, so it is allowed by GOD, as a Temporall Blessing, to Recreate and Cheer men after long Study and weary Labour in their Vocations: As the Scripture sayeth, Eccles. 4. 20. Wine and Musick rejoyceth the Heart.

And we read of one who doth report, that he saw a Lyon in London leave his Meat, to hear Musick. Yea, may we not behold the Birds of the Ayre, those pretty winged Choresters, how at the approach of the day do they warble forth their Makers Praise? amongst which, observe the little Lark, who by a Natural Instinct doth very often mount up to the Sky, as high as her Wings will bear her, and there warbles out her Melody as long as her strength enableth her; and then descends to her Flock, who presently sends up another sweet singing Chorister to supply this Divine Service. If then these Irrationall Creatures, so naturally Love and are delighted with Musick, how much more should Rationall Man, who is endued with Knowledge and Understanding? The Philosopher says, not to be Animal Musicum is not to be Animal Rationale. And the Italian Proverb is, GOD Loves not him, whom he hath not made to Love Musick.

But were there not a fear of too much tediousness in this Discourse, It might be asserted with Divine Plato and his Followers, that the Heavenly Soul by which the Universe is Animate, doth owe its Origin to this Lady, and Narrated how much the great Solon, that Son of Greece, bestowed on his Nephew, for teaching him one Saphick-Tune: And how much pains the wise Socrates, (though full of Years,) did greedily bestow upon the Lute. Yea, History tells us, that the Ancient Brittains of this Island, had Musicians before they had Books. Alfred a Saxon King, was well skilled in all manner of Learning, but in his knowledge of Musick took most delight. But to come nearer home, K. Edward the sixth in England, was a great Lover and Encourager of Musick: Yea, Queen Elizabeth was not onely a Lover of this Divine Science, but also a good proficient therein: And K. James of Blessed Memorie did extoll Musick so much, that he granted his Letters Patents to the Musicians in London for an Incorporation. And not onely did he love and esteeme this Divine Science in others, but his own Excellency in the same (among other Royall Enduments worthie of so great a King) made him Famous and Admired in that Age, (and will do while Time shall endure) especially his dexterous Skill upon the Melodious Harp, wherein [and in all other Royall Vertues] he traced the Steps of that Sweet-Singer of Israel. To this purpose, I cannot pass the Elaborat Testimony of the Famous Du-Bartas; who, when he hath deservedly Extolled those Holy Songs of K. David, and his Skill on the Harp maketh a Close thus, Englished by Ioshua Sylvester,

Gross Vulgar, hence; with hands profanely-vile,
So holy things presume not to defile,
Touch not these sacred stops, these silver strings:
This Kingly Harp is onely meet for Kings.
And so behold, towards the farther North,
Ah see, I see upon the Banks of FORTH

author of the book.* It has been thought probable that the "brief Introduction to Musick" was his share of the work, and that the selection of the songs and music was made by John Forbes the elder. If the address mentioned above was written by the latter, then our supposition is wrong. But this edition was not printed until after the death of John Forbes, stationer, and his son John Forbes, printer, may have

(Whose force-full stream runs smoothly serpentine)
A Valiant, Learned, and Religious King,
Whose sacred Art retuneth excellent
This rarely-sweet celestial Instrument :
And David's Truchman, rightly doth resound
(At the Worlds end) his eloquence renown'd.
Dumbartans Clyde stands still to hear his voice :
Stone-rowling Tay seems thereat to rejoyce :
The trembling Cyclads, in great Lummond-Lake,
After his sound their lusty gambols shake :
The (Trees-brood) Bar-geese, mid th' Hebridian wave,
Unto his Tune their far flown wings do wave :
And I my Self in my pyde Pleid a slop,
With Tune-skild foot after his Harp doth hop.

Nor was his late Sacred Magestie, and Blessed Martyr, K. CHARLES the First, behind any in the Promotion of this Science : of whose Vertues and Pietie, [by the Infinite Mercy of the Almighty GOD] this Kingdom now enjoys a living Example in his Gracious SON, Our Dread Sovereign, K. CHARLES the Second, By the Grace of GOD, KING of GREAT-BRITAIN, FRANCE and IRELAND, Defender of the Ancient and True Apostolick FAITH, &c. Who hath brought all things to their Ancient Order, and put an end to all Dismall Discords, yea, string'd the Hearts of Britain with true Loyaltie.

And now, seeing it hath pleased Divine Providence, in the PERSONS of Your Honorable Wisdoms, to Bless the Bench of Famous BON-ACCORD, with such a Harmonious Heavenly Consort, of as many Musicians as MAGISTRATS : He hath therefore made bold to Present Your Hs. with this present Edition, solemnly Engaging, that as It received Its first Origin (under the Patrocinie of Your Hs. Worthie Predecessors) from BON-ACCORD, and Its present Growth from Your Goodness, so It should Period Its Stature with Your Pleasure : That so, Your Hs. Obedient Servant, who hath still made it His resolute Purpose, and constant Resolution, to sail all Winds, and scrupe up the weak Parts which GOD and Nature hath bestowed upon Him : that so, at least, with the Ephesian Bee, He might Contribute His little Wax, and silly Bumb, to the Hyve of Famous BON-ACCORDS Common-well, seeing He owes His Native Birth-Right to this Famous Place, (since, 1576) which Obligation, doth greatly incite Him to serve Your Hs. (as Your Own most Obsequious Servant) all the days of His Life. He shall not weary Your Hs. Patience, Admit then this poor Present to Your Hs. Favourable Acceptance, It's Breath and Being depends on Your Brow, to receive Its Sentence from the Same, whether It shall be smothered in the Birth, or view the Publick under Your Hs. Patrocinie : However, that the best Blessings and Out-bearings of the ALMIGHTY may still Accompany Your Wisdoms in all Your Honorable Designs and Enterprises ; And that BON-ACCORD may resemble Heaven, in an Harmonious CONCORD, Shall be the DAILY PRAYER of

Most Obedient
and Faithfull Servant,
John Forbes.

added that address. This is rendered the more likely if we consider the manner in which it concludes; Forbes promises another publication of a similar kind, but, so far as we know, he failed to fulfil this intention.*

A considerable part of the income of the Aberdeen printers of that date came from the profit derived from the sale of their Almanacs or Prognostications. These Almanacs had become famous,† and were copied and re-issued by other printers in a most unscrupulous manner. A chapman named Alexander Gray brought one thousand of these Prognostications to Aberdeen. This caused such annoyance to Forbes that he complained to the magistrates. The Town Council passed

* Address to the Reader, Forbes's Cantus, 1682.

To all Ingenuous and true Lovers of Musick.

Courteous Reader,

The two former Impressions of this Musick-Book, finding so generall Acceptance, hath Encouraged Me, to adventure upon the Printing of this Third Edition: In which, I have not only made it my care, to amend some Defects, which were into the former Impressions, But indeed, to new Modell the whole, by adding a considerable number of excellent choise Italian Songs, and English-Ayres, all in three Parts, (vis.) two Trebles and a Bass, which were never Printed with the former Impressions, and that for the severall humours of all Persons, Male and Female, Old and Young: wherefore (I may truly say) this Musick-Book as it is now Published (for such sweet Harmonious Songs) hath never been Extant in this Nation. You have also herewith Printed, for the Encouragement of Young Beginners in Vocall Musick, the Print of the Hand, for teaching the Gam thereon, with the Scale of the Gam, and Parts thereof: As also, a full Exposition of the Gam and Clieffs, Moods, Degrees, Concords, and Discords, &c., and that into a plain and brief manner, for every ones Capacity. I must confess, the Work as to the Musick is not mine, but for Printing, and Publishing hereof, I am still ready and most willing in my Generation to improve my Talent, and Parts, (which the ALMIGHTY, of His Infinite Goodness hath been pleased to bestow upon Me,) both for the Good of this CITY and of My Countrey: Therefore, if these My Labours prove Pleasant and Delightfull, by Your favourable Acceptance, the same shall incite Me very shortly to Publish abroad, severall other Musicall Songs and Ayres of various Kynds, both Catches, and Parts-Songs, which are not readily to be found within this Kingdom, with a brief and plain Introduction to Musick conform to each severall Book, all very pleasant for every humour, yea, harmful to None. And that all my painfull Labours may tend for this City and my Countries Good, shall be the hearty PRAYER and earnest DESYRE of

Your Servant

Iohn Forbes.

The said day, anent the supplicatione given in to the counsell be John Forbes, younger, printer in the said burgh, mentioning that wher ane great part of his calling and imployment was takine from him by merchands and chopmen, who brocht from the south pamphlets and litle books, which he could affoord at as easie ane rait as they did sell the samen, and particularlie that Alexander Gray, chopman, had latlie brocht home about ane thousand prognostications which he could have furnished at ane more easie rait ; and seeing the saids books ware ane great part of his lyvliehood, and that he therby was disenabled to pay the merchands the paper he did buy wpon the accompt of his imployment for the creadit of the toune ; therfor desyreing the counsell to be pleasit to consider the premisses, and to emitte ane act for restraining the lyke in tyme comeing, and to impose such censure wpon the former contraveiners as they sould find expedient, seing ther predecessors had done the same before, and that it had been the laudable custome of this burgh in all tyme bygone to exempt ther printer from all taxationes and publict burdines relateing to his imployment, that they wold be pleasit to grant him the lyke favour, seing he was most willing to doe all service his prediccursors had before done, as in the supplicatione was conteinit : The counsell haveing hard and considerit the same, and being advyseit therwith, ordaines that no merchant or chopman, or other persone whatsumever within this burgh, sall bring hom or sell any pamphlets or litle books qlk the petitioner can affoord, he alwayes selling the same at ane ordinarie valow, and that under such penaltie and censure as the counsell sall appoynt ; and ordaines intimatione heirof to be made be the drume thorow the toune ; And as for the said Alexander Gray, ordaines him to be conveynit befor the magistratis and rebookit, and ordaineit to forbear the lyke in tyme comeing, with certificatione of greater censure ; and anent the taxationes and publict impositiones, declares the petitioner free therof in all and everie thing his prediccursors of his imployment war liberat of the same. *

Some years after the event we have just recorded a more serious difficulty befell the Aberdeen printers. Andrew Anderson, who had first exercised his craft as a printer in Glasgow, and afterwards in Edinburgh, joined with the printers in the latter city to apply for a patent, to be taken out in his name, by which they were to be vested with the office of King's printer. Their application was successful, and in the year 1671 they obtained the patent. By virtue of this privilege, no printer in the kingdom was allowed to print any book, however small or unimportant, without first receiving permission from Anderson. Neither did these Edinburgh printers allow their patent to remain a dead-letter, for they prosecuted all the other Scotch printers for disregarding their rights and privileges. Forbes appears to have taken vigorous steps to resist this oppressive suit. On the 7th of February, 1622, the Edinburgh printers wrote a letter to the Magistrates of Aberdeen, in which they abandon the action against Forbes. They also dispense with their privilege, so far as Forbes or any other person licensed by the Magistrates, the Bishop, or the Clergy of Aberdeen, are concerned. The letter is engrossed in the Minutes of the Town Council, but without any further information about this curious transaction.

During the whole of the period, from the appointment of Forbes as printer until the year 1674, it has been impossible to dissociate the events in the life of the father from those in that of his son. A line of demarcation at the year 1667 has been drawn in the bibliographical portion of this book, separating the books printed by the elder Forbes and his son, from those bearing the name of the latter alone. But we do not think that the father ceased to be a partner in the business until very shortly before his death. It must be remembered that it was, properly speaking, the son who was the printer; his father retaining his old designation of Stationer until the last.

* Aberdeen Council Register, Vol. LV., pp. 362-363.

On the 10th of June, 1674, John Forbes, printer, laid a petition before the Town Council, asking their assistance in a financial difficulty with his father. The minute is of the greatest interest and importance, as showing the salary paid by the Colleges to the printers at that time. Forbes states it to be "about threescoir pounds . . . yeirlie." The Council, after consideration, granted the printer's request, and accepted the proffered security of types, presses, and salary from the Colleges.

The elder Forbes had a son named Alexander, who entered the church, and of whom mention has been made in another place.† The following interesting particulars regarding Alexander Forbes and his descendants have been gleaned for us by Arthur D. Morice, Esq., Advocate in Aberdeen, from Scot's Fasti, Maidment's Catalogue of Scottish Writers, and Johnston's Memoir of James Young and Rachel Cruickshank. The last quotation is valuable, as it gives information about descendants in direct line from John Forbes, Stationer, the last of whom died as lately as 1857.

Account of the Learned Men and Writers in Aberdeen.

Mr. Alexander Forbess, of the noble Family of Pitsligo, born in Abdn., a young man and Expertissimus in Mathematicks, and dyed Minister of the gospell at Fintray, near the River Don.—This is copied from one of Wodrow's MSS. in the Advocates' Library, and printed in Maidment's Catalogue of Scottish Writers, Edinburgh, T. Stevenson, 1833, p. 118.

Mr. Alexander Forbes, Son to John Forbes, a merchant and Stationer in Aberdeen, wrote a little tract, De Rota Arithmetica, dedicate to the Valiant Prince James, Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth.—Ibid., p. 124.

Maidment says the above quoted Catalogue of the Aberdeen Writers was "not unlikely procured from Sir Robt. Sibbald," and that it is in the handwriting of Wodrow, and "inaccurately transcribed." The Compiler apparently thought there were two Alex. Forbes's.

Wm. Forbes of Badiefurrow, who married Anna, d. of the Rev. Alexander Forbes, had an only daughter Jean, who married William Johnston, Pewterer in Abdn., and Convener of the Incorporated Trades, one of the Craig branch of the Caskieben Johnstons.

Wm. Johnston and Jean Forbes had a son, James Johnston of Badiefurrow, who sold that place (now called Manar). He had three daughters, who lived and died unmarried at Calsayseat, at the end of George St.—Split the Winds.—See Mr. Alexander Johnston's James Young and Rachel Cruickshank, Appendix, p. lxi., Note z.

On the 2nd of December, 1675, the Kirk and Bridge Work Accounts contain the record of the burial of "John Forbes, Stationer, in the kirkyard." His son, the printer, appears to have been a shifty man, and ready to work for all parties who could remunerate him. But he felt the weight of a magisterial censure in the spring of the year 1676, having undertaken to print a book for the Quakers, who, at that unhappy period, were the objects of very severe disabilities. One, Gilbert Black, a baillie of the city, in his zeal for orthodoxy, went to the printing house and seized a portion of the book. The Council not only approved of this act, but in addition they recommended that one of their number should acquaint the bishop with what had happened. We do not know if the matter went any further, but we fully believe that the Quakers' book was in due time printed and circulated. *

One more instance is on record of the printer having been rebuked by the Aberdeen Magistrates and Council. In the year 1683 he printed a pamphlet which gave offence to some members of the medical faculty in the burgh. A complaint was lodged, and the printer was called to appear before the Magistrates, and rebuked for the offence of having printed the treatise without any authority. They warned him not to print any book or pamphlet in future without first receiving the Council's permission, which would be granted if, after due examination, the work was approved of. †

The difficulties in dealing with the piratical printers do not appear to have been overcome. Every year added to the loss and disappointment of Forbes, who saw his Almanacs, the most profitable source of his income, copied and reprinted with most bare-faced impudence. The great numbers of these Prognostications printed by Forbes must have tempted the less favoured brethren of his profession. It is said that he generally sold 50,000 copies annually of his Almanacs, at the price of a plack, or one-third of an English penny, for each copy. ‡ Agnes Campbell, the king's printer in Edinburgh, and Robert Saunders, printer in Glasgow, infringed Forbes's copyright, and affixed their names to the Prognostications published by them. This gave Forbes an opportunity of prosecuting his opponents, and early in 1684 he complained to the lords of the privy council. The suit was successful, and the offending parties were warned to respect Forbes's privileges in the future.

* See page 122.

“Edinburgh, 28th of February, 1684.—The Lords of his Majesty's right honourable Privy Council having considered the lybel and complaint persued by John Forbes, printer in Aberdeen, against Agnes Campbell, his Majesty's printer, and Patrick Tailzie, now her spouse, for his interest; and Robert Sanders, printer in Glasgow; for an injury done him in reprinting the Almanack in Aberdeen, printed by him; and the said Robert Sanders, not only reprinting thereof, but counterfeiting and affixing the Arms of Aberdeen thereto; with the Defender's answer to the complaint, and Report of a Committee of their number, to whom the consideration of that affair was remitted; Do find that the said John Forbes hath been in use and possession of printing yearly an Almanack, as printer to the town and university of Aberdeen: and, therefore, allows and authorises him to continue to print the said Aberdeen Almanack, as he hath formerly been in use to do: and discharges the said Agnes Campbell, Robert Sanders, or any other printers in this kingdom, to reprint the same, at any time, or to affix the Town of Aberdeen's Arms thereto, in all time coming, as they will be answerable. Extracted by me

“Sic. Sub. WILL. PATERSON, Cls. Sti. Consilii.” *

That any error should be found in his Prognostications, touched Forbes in one of his tenderest points. The errors were doubtless many and great if we are to judge from instances that have come under our observation. In the year 1683, James Paterson, “Mathematician,” in an Almanac printed at Edinburgh, fell foul of Forbes, and abused him and his Aberdeen Almanacs in a rhyme, which is sufficiently amusing to warrant its preservation.

* Fountainhall's Dec., Vol. I., p. 273.

From Aberdene there came these two last years
Some Almanacks, or rather Jock the Liers ;
Whose Author doth no lesse to gain renown,
But carpeth still against our ancient Town :
Saying we counterfeit his Almanack,
Whose value truly is not worth a plack :
Because each year his errors doth increase,
Whereas he ought each year to make them lesse.
He names not those who doth such practice use,
But for one's fault a City will abuse :
Therefore I blame him who doth Art disgrace,
Not knowing where he doth his errors place.
The tys of his Eclipse each year before
Three digits was, I never saw it more,
Except this year, he says that we shall see
The Sun eclipsed after he set shall be.
The Sun doth set ten minuts before four
At Aberdene, which is near half an hour
Before his Eclipse fall at Aberdene,
A Prodigie, the like was never seen !
I think his ten digits he may well call
Total, because I'm sure it will not fall
At such a time as he to us doth name,
Therefore I think he therin may think shame :
When as it shall be seen two hours before,
I do not erre, although I had said more :
When his begins, by right it should near end,
Therefore you may by mine his errors mend.
More of his errors I yet will to you show,
So that the vulgar may it clearly know :
The first quarter in August this last year,
On Saturday he did make to appear,
Whereas on Wednesday the Change did fall before,
Making that Quarter four dayes, little more :
By which account the Moon comes soon to age,
Or else in haste hath run in a great rage.
When she upholds such men who think no shame
To publish errors in their Countrey's name ;
Being a Kingdom wherein she hath most might,
Under the Sign wherein she takes delight.
Also he errs again in his Tide Table
At Leith, as if the Moon were not so able
To rule the Tides here, as at Aberdene :
Likewise he errs this year for Hallow-even,

Saying it falls upon the Munday night,
 When Hallow-day on Thursday falls by right,
 Then Hallow-even should on the Wednesday fall,
 He errs in this, he errs almost in all
 His Almanacks : by mine his errors mend,
 I say no more, I think it time to end.

Forbes did not quietly submit to such abuse, but in very indignant language replied to Paterson. His defence, which is found at the conclusion of the "Mariner's Everlasting Almanack," is a most curious mixture of angry invective and scorn for his enemy. It is interesting also on account of the complaints against Campbell and Saunders, who were soon to receive a censure from the privy council.

For without any just ground, or provocation given, James Paterson did most ignorantly Rhyme against me, into his Almanack for the year 1683, and likewise into his Almanack for the year 1684 : making a great noise, concerning the mistake of two dayes for Hallow-Even, altho Hallow-Day was exactly right, both for the day of the Week, and day of the Moneth ; for all the World knoweth Hallow Even to fall upon the night before Hallow-Day. But his Errors are more gross, making the Flood of Noah in his Chronologie, in all his Almanacks three hundred years short : A very beastly Error, besides other gross Errors, which I forbear at this occasion any more to mention. . . . Truly I am heartily sorry that both Mathematician and Printers are so evil Principled in the Grounds of Christianity . . . and for my own part, I do declare it to the whole World, I hate such unrighteous and base Practises. For Agnes Campbel Spouse to Patrick Telfer, hath caused Counterfit and Re-print my Almanacks into her printing-house these severall years bygone, sometimes Entituling them by Aberdeens Almanack, and other times, according to Forbesses Almanack, besides she hath for the ensuing year 1684, caused Print an Almanack as it were set fourth at Aberdeen, and Printed in Aberdeen, which is a most notorious untrueth : impudently affixing thereto, some Lynes in the End, of Dogrell Rhyme, whereby she would have me to patronise her base Execrations ; as tho I, (contrary to Christianity and the good Conduct of Nature,) should wish any man for any cause to hang himself . . .

And as for Robert Sanders, Printer in Glasgow, he hath not onely inserted a notorious Untrueth into all his Almanacks these diverse years bygone, (saying set forth at Aberdeen, as if the Famous Colledge of Glasgow had not so much Mathematicks as to set forth ane yearly Almanack, which in him was no great Act of Prudence,) but also, contrare to the Good and Iust Lawes of this Ancient Kingdom, he hath caused Counterfit the City of Aberdeen's Armes, and affixed them upon his most Erronious, and Uncorrected Almanack, for the year 1684: whereof I am ashamed to speak, that such an Almanack should be published in this Kingdom; as may be seen into the Termly Quarters and Aspects, &c., tending much to the Discredit of the Famous City of Glasgow: not deserving to be called their Printer, Consideratis, Considerandis. *

In the Poll Book for Aberdeen, made up in 1696, the printer and his family are entered as follows:—

John Forbes Printer Stock under 5000 Merks for himselfe and wife Margrat Marjorie Jean and John his children a servant Bathia Downie 16 merks yeirly - - - - - £4 17 4†

A passing glimpse of Forbes and of old customs is given us in an entry in Marischal College Accounts for the year November, 1698, to November, 1699. The practice of giving drinkmoney to the workmen has been already touched on, but here we have the College authorities providing some kind of entertainment to Forbes and themselves at the transaction of a little bit of business.

See page 230 of this work.

In bringing this notice of Forbes's life to a close, it may be interesting to mention, that the Kirk and Bridge Work Accounts contain several entries that relate to his family. It will be observed that the burials noted below all refer, without doubt, to the children of the younger Forbes, except the earliest, in which the parent is styled stationer, which designation we have seen was generally given to his father.

1668, April 5, Johne forbes stationer his child.

1672, March 31, John Forbes printer ane child in churchyard.

1677, Augt. 24, John Forbes printer ane child. k.y^d.

1678, Sept. 17, John Forbes printer ane chyld under arme.

Forbes's own death occurred in 1704, previous to the printing of a Thesis which was to be disputed on the 14th of December. In the imprint of that book he is called "the late John Forbes." * He was survived by his widow, Margaret Cuthbord, and a daughter named Margaret, the former of whom succeeded him as printer. Her admission to the office took place on the 7th of February, 1705. The Council Register narrates that "the said day Margaret Cuthboord relict of the deceased John Forbes printer was admitted to succeed her husband in the said office as on her bill and conform to the contract with her deceased husband." †

It will be seen in the next chapter that this arrangement did not hold good for a very long period.

CHAPTER IV.

JAMES NICOL.

WE have reached a most uninteresting and uneventful period in the history of Aberdeen printing. From the death of John Forbes the younger, to the year 1711, the labours of the press appear to have been confined to the official publications connected with the Town and University. No book of general interest, except the "Bourignonism Displayed,"* was printed in Aberdeen, so far as we can ascertain, during the six years prior to Nicol's appointment. The quality of the work had declined, and we regret to say that no improvement was apparent during Nicol's tenure of office.

Nicol, prior to the year 1710, had married Margaret Forbes, the daughter of the former printer. On the 6th of December, 1710, Forbes's widow petitioned the Town Council to admit her daughter and Nicol, her son-in-law, as successors to her in the printing business. The minute of Council 'commences with a very long preamble containing the petition, and concludes as follows :—

The saids provost baillies and counsell haveing heard seen and considered the sd. petition and being at length rypely and weell advised therewith They gave and granted and hereby gives and grants to the sds. petitioners the liberty and priviledge of printing within this burgh with all other immunitys and priviledges conteint in the above narrated act of counsell conform thereto in all poynts and that dureing the saids petitioners ther good service and serveing the leidges with good typs and paper and with sufficient servants as also they granted to the saids petitioners the priviledge of the said printing and dwelling hous in the north syde of the Castlegate of this burgh maill free destinat and appoynted be the town of Abdn. for yt. effect. *

There is only one incident which we have been able to recover in the career of Nicol as printer. The rebellion of 1715 found Aberdeen with a Magistracy true to the reigning monarch. But by a blunder on the part of the executive, the town was left defenceless. On the 28th September it was taken possession of by the Earl Marischal, who proclaimed the Pretender. The Hanoverian Magistrates left the appointment of their successors entirely in the hands of the Jacobite faction, who, on the same day as the Earl Marischal arrived, elected a Council of their way of thinking. This Magistracy was devoted to the Stuart family, and did what was in its power to assist in recovering for them the crown they had lost. The head-quarters of the army, which was to contend with the forces of the House of Hanover, was stationed at Perth. The Earl of Mar, the Commander-in-chief, felt the want of a press to print proclamations, and sent a requisition for one to the loyal Aberdeen Magistrates. The Council, recognising the fact that the press and types belonged to Nicol, gave orders to the treasurer to grant an obligation to the printer for the return of his property in as good order as when it was sent. They also made provision for horses and carriages to transport the press and types to Perth, and were not unmindful of proper packing cases. The minute is signed by Provost Patrick Bannerman, a staunch adherent of the House of Stuart.

* Aberdeen Council Register, Vol. LVIII., pp. 215-216.

20 October 1715.

The said day, the provost produced ane order subscriyved be the Earle of Marr, commander-in-chiefe of his Majesties forces in Scotland, daited at Perth the fourteenth of October instant, directed to the magistrats of Aberdeen, ordering them furthwith to deliver to Robert Drummond, servant to Mr Robert Freebairne, the best printing press, with such typs, utensills, and other materialls as Mr Drummond should choise and find necessary, and to see them paiked up in good order, and to provyde horsses and proper carriages for transporting them to Perth, or where the army should be at the tyme ; after reading of which order, the provost held out that seeing the said press, typs, and other utensills, did not belong to the town, but to James Nicoll, printer, it wes just and reaseonable that he should be secured for redelivery thereof, or the value of the same, and that the thesaurer should advance what money is requisit for makeing boxes and others for holding the same, and for transporting all to Perth, which being considered be the counsell they approved of sending of the said press, typs, and utensills thereof to Perth, or where the army shall be, and appoynts the thesaurer to grant ane oblidgement to the said James Nicoll for returneing the forsaid press, typs, and utensills to him in alse good condition as they wer receaved, and makeing up any deterioration thereof, or paying him the value of the same ; as also appoynts the thesaurer to pay what charges shall be debursed for makeing boxes and other carriages for transporting the said press to Perth, or where the army shall be, and for men and horss hyre, and expenses in carrying the same there ; and the saids expenses to be allowed to the thesaurer in the first end of the accompts ; and the counsell will consider, when the printing press is returned, what loss the said James Nicoll sustains throw the want thereof. Pat. Bannerman, provost. *

No immediate steps appear to have been taken to carry out the wishes of the Earl of Mar. Indeed, we are doubtful if Nicol's press ever left Aberdeen. The next notice of this matter we can find is the resolution of the Town Council at a meeting held on the 4th of November. On that day they order the treasurer to borrow a sum of money from the master of Kirk and Bridge Works to defray the expenses of sending the press, and also to pay for three hundred Lochaber axes which the Town had been requested to furnish.

* Aberdeen Council Register Vol. LVIII., pp. 426-427.

4 November 1715.

The said day, the counsell takeing to ther consideration that the Right Honorable the Earle of Marr, commander-in-cheife of his Majesties forces in Scotland, had ordered the town to make three hundered Lochabar axes for the use of his Majesties forces, and to send the same to the camp at Perth, or where the army shall be for the tyme; and that the said Earle of Marr had ordered the towne to send one of the printing presses to the said camp: therfor the magistrats and counsell appoynted James Gelly, thesaurer, to borrow the sowme of from Thomas Shand, master of kirk and bridges works of Aberdeen, for paying the saids Lochabar axes, and defraying the expenses in transporting the same and the said printing press to Perth, or where the army shall be for the tyme. Pat. Bannerman, provost. *

No later mention of Nicol's press occurs in the minutes of the Town Council until the time of his retirement in 1736. A passing glimpse of him is to be found in an act, dated the 21st of April, 1732, in which the master of Kirk Work is ordered to build a desk for Nicol, "in the north side of the new church, without the pillars, betwixt the two pillars on the west side of the pulpit." The rent to be paid for the pew is fixed at three pounds Scots money. †

Nicol appears to have voluntarily retired from the printing business. The reasons for his doing so are unknown to us. In the deed of demission he states that it was for "onerous causes, good respects, and considerations." It will be seen that he still occupied the printing house, and enjoyed the same privileges as his predecessors in office. The Council, at their meeting on the 6th of May, 1736, received Nicol's resignation, an abbreviated copy of which is subjoined.

* Aberdeen Council Register, Vol. LVIII., pp. 436-437

† Aberdeen Council Register, Vol. LX., p. 268.

6, May 1736.

The said Day there was presented to the Council a Dimission and Renunciation from James Nicol Printer to the Town, of his office of being Printer to the Toun and University of Aberdeen, Which being read in Council they accepted thereof, and declared his said office vaccant, and appointed his Dimission to be Recorded in the Council book, Whereof the tenor follows. Be it known to all men by thir presents Me James Nicol Printer to the town and University of Aberdeen ffor certain onerous causes good respects and considerations moveing me, To have Resigned and Demitted, Likeas I hereby for me my heirs and assigneys, Resign and Demitt, all right and title which I have or can pretend to have to the said office of Printer, either be vertue of Acts of Town Council in my favours, or any other manner of way whatsomever, As also I hereby for me and my forsaid, Renounce, Discharge and overgive all right and title I have to the possession of the Printing house, In virtue of the saids Acts or other ways, And that to and in favour of the Provost Baillies and Council of Aberdeen and their successors in office, with full power to them, To Elect, nominate and Choose any person they think proper to succeed me in the forsaid office of Printer, from and after the term of Whitsunday next, and to grant Acts and Presentations in their favours, and with power to such a person to be elected by them To enter to the possession of the said printing house at the said term, and to bruik and enjoy the same as fully and freely in all respects after the said term of Whitsunday next, as I might have done myself before granting hereof, but any deed of wrong whatsomever, and I oblige me to warrand this present Demission and Renunciation to be good valid & effectual at all hands and against all deadly, Consenting to the registration hereof in the books of Council and Session or others competent, Therein to remain for preservation, And if need be, that all execution necessary may pass hereon in form as effeers, . . . *

* Aberdeen Council Register, Vol. LX., p. 427.

The remainder of Nicol's life is a blank to us. No particulars can be gleaned of his career after his retirement. In the Treasurer's Accounts of the burgh for the years 1735-36, there is an entry which relates to Nicol, but with that exception our knowledge is at fault.*

In bringing this short history to a conclusion, it appears fitting to give a few particulars about the successor of Nicol. The same day on which the latter resigned, James Chalmers, the son of James Chalmers, Professor of Divinity in Marischal College, Aberdeen, made application to the Council to be appointed printer to the town. Chalmers states in his petition that he served his apprenticeship to James Nicol, and that he afterwards went to London, where he stayed a considerable time.† The request was granted, and with this began a new and a better race of printers, whose descendants are still in our midst. About the same time, for the precise date cannot be ascertained, Chalmers forwarded a petition to the authorities of Marischal College, begging them to continue their patronage to him which had been enjoyed by former printers. The document is interesting, and needs no apology.

thereof, And unto the Very Reverend Master John Osborn Principal of the said University, and the Professors, Masters and remanent Members of the same.

The Petition of James Chalmers, Printer in Aberdeen

Humbly Sheweth

That, by a Contract or Agreement past betwixt your Predecessors and the deceas'd John Forbes Printer to your University my Predecessor, there was a yearly Sallary of the sum of Twenty pound scots money appointed to him as your Printer, which was collected yearly from the students and punctually paid to him, And by the said agreement he obliged himself to print the publick Theses of Your University at the Rate of Ten Merks scots for each sheet, the students furnishing him with the paper. That as now I have succeeded him and his Heirs in the said office as your Printer, As the Encouraging men of my Profession tends greatly to the advancement of Learning, And as you and your Predecessors were always remarkable that way, So it is humbly hoped you will continue with me the same Sallary and Encouragement which you gave to the said John Forbes, And I shall endeavour always to serve you as faithfully and sufficiently as him or any other of my Predecessors.

May you therefore be pleased to consider the premises, and grant the Desire of this my Petition, by allowing me the same Sallary of Twenty pound scots yearly to be collected from the Students as formerly, and paid in yearly to the Regent who teaches the Magistrand Class or to the Procurator along with the Chamber Rents, as you shall think most fitt, that I may receive the same from them, And I hereby oblige myself to print all your publick Theses at the rate of Ten Merks scots for each sheet, you or the Students always furnishing me with paper. As also to print gratis all your Advertisements and other publick Papers which anyway concern your University, You likeways furnishing me with paper, and providing the same do not exceed one sheet.

JA. CHALMERS. *

We must now bring this account of the Aberdeen printers to a close, deeply sensible of its imperfections. It has always been a cause of regret to us, that this work was not undertaken by abler hands, and at an earlier date. Valuable material has been lost, and traditions have died out, which might have vastly added to the interest of the book. If Dr. Joseph Robertson had carried out his intention of writing some such book as this, Aberdeen would have possessed a history of its printers and their works, replete with interest, and more worthy of the subject than this poor effort.

bee (Gentle Reader) that you thinke the Price of this Booke too much for so little a Volume; yet if you will consider the Causes wherefore it must bee so, you will allow thereof the better, which bee foure: First, because hee who selleth it, intendeth, God willing, to bee readie and present, or one in his name, whensoever it shall please you to inquire for the same: for it is better to sell in such sort, as he who selleth may liue, and keepe the Town, nor at so low a rate, as he must leave the same, and disappoint you; when you aske for such a one as is not to bee found.
Secondlie, if you reade this Booke orderlie, and diligentlie, from the beginning, unto this place, I hope you will not finde it deare neyther, but within the value. Thirdlie, though it were otherwise, it may not bee solde anie cheaper at this first Impression: because there is but a few Printed, for an essay, upon an haste, and by guesse, as it were; partly since it is the Authors first Travels, and partly in respect of the tedious writing of so manie Characters, and much Writ, upon each Booke, after the Imprinting of the matter thereof. And fourthlie, because the Author maintayneth two or three daylie to fill up, and write in, all the foresayd Exemple
Letters and Words, in everie Extract, which is no small travell and charges, in comparison of those Bookes which have nothing in them, but such as is set downe, and printed all at ones, with one travell. But indeed within few yeares, God willing, when this Impression is solde, and newe Types bought, to supplie the travels nowc made with the Penne, and the Booke reformed, and Printed the seconde time, then it may perhaps bee solde at a farre lower rate, though much better of it selfe: to the which time, I entreate you to haue patience, and bee content with it as it is, and not only dispence with any apparent Dearth thereof now, but also excuse any fault you finde eyther in the Author in downe-setting, and correcting; or in Mee, in the Imprinting: and then I hope we shall please you better both in Travels and Price. Thus in the meane time, and for ever, I wish you to fare-well.

ALMANAC. A New Prognostication for the Yeare of our Lord God, 1623, Being the third after Leap-Yeare: Serving most fitlie for the Kingdom of Scotland and all the parts of North Britane.

Contents—A Brief Computation of Time; compleat with-in this present Yeare. The common Notes and moveable Feastes. A brieffe Rule concerning the influence of the Starrees, (viz.)—

*The statlie Starres plac'd in the lofty Skie,
Transport their influence in-to this Vall;
But in such sorte, as that GODS Dietie
Must be acknowledged above them all.*

*Starres governe men, God governes them againe:
His pre-science hath so ordained the same.
Then feare no Starres, they can-not work thy paine—
Vnlesse GOD please; with fayth trust in His Name.*

A Description of the foure quarters of the Year: and first of WINTER.

Instead of flowers and Grasse so green,
The Earth hath got another hew;
Frost, snow, and durtie Dales are scene
Where pleasant plants most fruitfull grew;
Childhood, cold reume, and phlegmatic state
Of winter's cold nature doeth best relate.

. . . The inconveniences which most commonly attend this Winter Quarter are Shipwrackes and great Sickneses, both on Sea and Land, proceeding of raw Phlegmaticke, and in-digested blood, or superfluitie of corrupt, rotten, and putrified humours, causing uncouth and strange-fitted Fevers, unmannerly Coghs, obstructions of the Lungen, and an unknowne paine in the Breast, Backe and Loynes.

Where-fore, for to prevent such Grieffs,
Vse Meats both warm and drye;
Both Head and Feete see warm thou keepe;
Eate much; drinke sparingly.

The Second Quarter called THE SPRING.

Most welcome is the fruitful spring
To creatures all that multiplie ;
Both Beasts and Birds doe skip and sing,
In flocking sorte abundantlie.
In sanguine men and youthfull yeares
This seasons nature best appears.

Now the beautifull Sunne, having shaken off the dabling drops of the watry Winter from its glorious beams, cometh foorth, and up-on the 11th of March maketh the day and night of equall length.

This season is naturally hote and moist, like unto youth ; and is the most wholesome part of the Year ; nothing apt to breede anie diseases ; but will perhaps bring foorth such as are bred alreadie in the bodies of men and women, especiallie in the secret parts : there-fore, beware wee Leachers. . . .

SUMMER.—

Bright Sol, having got its highest grade,
Lookes downe on Earth with hot aspect ;
Parching the Ground and Cornie Blade ;
Rypning all things with good effect ;
Fierce, cholericke men and middle age
Of Summer's nature doe presage.

HARVEST, or the fall of the Leaffe.

For good husband's paine, Harvest yields gaine
What-so-ever on Earth doeth grow ;
Each Tree, Plant, and Shrub, all for man's good,
Shew them their duetie GOD unto.
Crooked olde Age, Humour, Melancholie
Will Harvest's nature trulie verifie.

. . . This is sayd to be an unwholesome season, and according to natures operation, is cold and dry. The diseases are lyke to be manyfolde ; but especiallie the Pennie-lesse paine in the Pursse, shall cause much Heart-ache, and many Widows to be left though their husbands alive, which the Germans call Onbestorven Weduwen.

PHYSIC IN-DEEDE, TO SAVE FROM NEEDE.

Vse Doctor Free-man : free thyself from bands ;
Vse' Honest Doctor Mirth, at all commandes.
Vse Doctor Cooke ; But sell away no Lands ;
For on these three great part of Physic Stands.

I have copied this entry from "Bibles, &c., in the Collection of Lea Wilson, Esq., 1845," p. 248. BEVIS OF HAMPTON. The Historie of Sir Bevis of South-Hampton.

Printed in Aberdene, by Edward Raban, For David Melvill, 1630.

8°. A—I in eights, or 72 leaves. Black Letter. The running title is The Historie of Bevis of Hampton. The only copy known of this edition is that in the Huth Library. It was purchased at the Sale of

Mr. George Daniel's Library, in July, 1864, for the sum of £21. It bears the following MS. note by Mr. Daniel, written in 1838:—"An edition of extraordinary rarity of this ancient metrical Romance. I cannot trace another copy in any catalogue, nor have I found a collector or bookseller, who ever saw one . . . This copy was purchased by a Stationer's Traveller in Aberdeen, and sold to me."

Through the kindness of Dr. Webster, M.P., I am permitted to print a letter to him from the late Dr. David Laing, relating to this very rare volume:—

Signet Library. Edinburgh. Sept. 27, 1864. Dear Sir, On returning home from wandering about I received your letter of the 20th ult. It so happened I was in London during part of Daniel's Sale, but was too late to see either the Sir Bevis of Hampton, or the Black Letter Ballads sold. I also had cast a longing eye on the former, but knowing that it was all but hopeless the chance of getting it, I wrote to ascertain how far it corresponded with the English Version, of which a copy was in the same sale. As Raban's edition proved to be a modernized copy of the old English Metrical Romance, it had little intrinsic value. I had seen the book many years ago in Mr. Daniel's possession, and as a typographical curiosity, it would have been a desirable acquisition, and no other copy is known. If I remember, he told me it cost him a guinea, having been picked up at Aberdeen for one shilling. The books at that sale have fetched most preposterous prices.

Yours very truly,

D. LAING.

The copy examined in the Bodleian Library was defective; Signature N, or the last four leaves were wanting. I was, however, fortunate in discovering them bound up with Gerard's Meditations, printed by Raban in 1637, which had been purchased at Dr. J. Hill Burton's Sale. The Psalter to which they belonged formed part of the Montague bequest.
In Lea Wilson's Catalogue, p. 249, a copy is described as 18°, which I have little doubt is the same edition as this.

WEDDERBURNE, DAVID. A Short Introduction to Grammar.

Aberdeen. 1632.

8°. Dr. Joseph Robertson in his sketch of Wedderburne's Life and Writings in the "Collections for a History of the Shires of Aberdeen and Banff," p. 62, gives the above on the authority of Ruddiman's Bibliotheca Romana, Edinb., 1757, 8°, p. 62. This is an earlier edition of the one described below, printed in 1637, but as yet I have failed to trace a copy dated 1632.

The great trouble Wedderburne experienced in the publication of his grammar, as will be seen from the following extracts, arose out of an order of certain commissioners appointed by Parliament. In 1612 it was ordained by these commissioners that the Grammatica Nova of Alexander Hume be used exclusively in the schools of Scotland. In consequence of this, we find in the Council Register of Aberdeen, that on the fourteenth of July, 1630, "the prouest, baillies, and counsall ordaines the soume of fourtie pundis to be given to Mr. Daud Wedderburne, maister of the Grammer schole, for making his chairges to Edinburgh, being chairgeit to compeir befor the Lordis of Privie Counsall, anent the new grammer set out be Mr. Alexander Hume, quhilk soume they ordaine to be peyit to the said Mr. Daud, be Robert Skeine, thesaurer, and the same to be allowit to him in his comptis." [Extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Aberdeen, 1625-1642, p. 29.]

Wedderburne on that occasion requested permission to print his own Grammar, but it does not appear to have been granted, for, on the first of December, 1630, "the prouest, baillies, and counsell haveand consideratioun that the new grammer laitlie reformed be Mr. David Wedderburne, maister of the grammer schuile of this burghe, can nather be printit nor publishit for the vse of yong sholares, whome the same concernis, vnto the tyme the same resaive approbatioune from the Lordis of Counsall: thairfoir thay have thocht meit and expedient that the said Mr. David address himself with the said wark to Edinburgh, in all convenient diligence for procuring the saidis Lordis thair approbatioun thairto, and ordaines the soume of ane hundreth pundis money to be debursit to him be the tounes thesaurer for making of his expenssis in the said erand." [Extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Aberdeen, 1625-1642, p. 32.]

The required approbation was difficult to "purches," for on the thirtieth of March, 1631, the town council "gives and grantis to Mr. David Wedderburne, maister of thair grammer schole, the soume of ane hundreth merkis money to help to defray the greit chairges quhairin he hes bein drawin be his long attendance in Edinburgh, Sanct-andrews, and Glasgow, in the purches and obtaining of the council and clergies of this kingdome, thair approbatioun and allowance to his new reformed grammer, to be payit to him be Alex. Stewart, thesaurer, quhilk soume they ordane to be allowit to the said thesaurer in his comptis." [Extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Aberdeen, 1625-1642, p. 35.]

At last the book was printed and published, for we learn from another entry in the Council Register, that on the twelfth of September, 1632, "the prouest, baillies, and counsall, givis and grantis to Mr Daud Wedderburne, maister of the grammer schole of this burghe, the soume

of twa hundreth merkis Scottis money, for printing of the new grammer laitlie set out be him be resone of his dedicatioun of the same to the magistrattis and counsall, whilk soume they ordaine to be payit to the said Mr Dauid be George Moresone, deane of gild, and the same to be allowit to the said deane of gild in his cômptis." [Extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Aberdeen, 1625-1642, p. 50.]

Not contented with permission to use the Grammar in his native city, we find him trying to obtain the same monopoly for his work which had been granted to Hume's Grammar. On the twenty-eighth of June, 1633, the parliament referred to a committee of the lords of the privy council, "ane petitioun givin in be Maister Dauid Wedderburne Maister of the Grammer Skoole of Abirdeine desyring that the Short and Facile Grammer drawn vp be him and his paines may be allowit and ordanit to be taucht vniuersallie through all the skooles of the kingdome of Scotland and all vthers grammers dischargit to be taught withine the samyne." [Acts of the Parliaments of Scotland, Vol. V., p. 48, Thomson's edition.]

The following entries in the Accounts of the Burgh of Aberdeen refer to the orders of the Town Council quoted above. [Miscellany of the Spalding Club, Vol. V., pp. 148, 149, 104.]

1630-1631. Item, be ordinance of counsell, of the dait the penult of Merche, 1631, delyuerit to Mr. Dauid Wedderburne, maister of the grammer scool, in help of his expenssis, be reasone of his long stay in Edinbrugh upon the approbatioun of his new grainer, 66 lib. 13s. 4d.

1631-1632. Item, be vertew of ane ordinance of counsall, of the dait the aucht day of Februar, 1632, debursit to Mr. Dauid Wedderburne, maister of the grammer schoole, for making of his chairges to Edinbrugh, to procure the lordis of secret counsall thair approbatioun to the new grammer laitlie set furth be him, 100 lib.

1632-1633. Item, giwen to Mr. Dauid Wedderburne, att the counsells command, for helping to print his grammer, 100 lib.

The termination is doubtful; there may have been another printed leaf, viz.—K 4. Hazlitt in "Collections and Notes, 2nd Series," gives the collation as A, 4 ll, B—K 4 in eights. The above is one of a few misdated copies of the second edition. The book was originally published in 1634, and a second edition in 1635. I have not yet met with a copy of the latter with the true date, the former will be found under 1634.

says—"Only two copies of this volume, hitherto undescribed, are known to be preserved." I have not seen a complete copy, and am indebted to Dr. Laing's note for the title given above. The volume contains Latin verses by Arthur Johnston and Alexander Gardyne, with translations, and concludes with "An Epitaph" by Dr. Robert Baron. In the University

Library, Aberdeen, there is an imperfect copy, wanting titlepage and all except the last ten leaves, and headed as follows :—

“An Epitaph, | Or | Consolatorie Epistle, | Upon the death of the

WEDDERBURNE, DAVID. Meditationes Cam-pestræ Wedderburni.

Aberdeen, E. Raban, 1634.

12°. Taken from one of the papers, "Aberdeen Bibliographer's Manual," in the Aberdeen Herald, Dec. 11th, 1858. Evidently copied from a sale catalogue, as it has in front of it "Ernesti Dedicatio ad Ciceronem"; two books most likely to be sold in one lot. The "Meditationes Campestres, Centuriæ I. & II.," were printed in 1643, and "Centuria III.," in 1644. This may be an earlier edition, but I am inclined to think it is a misprint.

Forbes's birth, death, and time and place of burial, ¶¶ 2¹ Inscription on his tomb, ¶¶ 2² Verses to Dr. John Forbes of Corse, ¶¶ 3¹—4¹ A Dolorous Expression, &c. (in verse), by David Lindsay, Parson of Belhelvie, ¶¶ 4²—¶¶¶ 1² An Eclog by the same, with an Epigram by Arthur Johnston on the last page, ¶¶¶ 2 Latin verses to John Forbes, by Prof. John Lundie, A—HHH 3¹, pp. 2-429 (p. 2 is on A 1²), Funerall Sermon, &c., HHH 3²—4² blank. Signatures EE and FF are marked CC and DD, and page 201-216 in place of 217-232; page 234 is mispagged 218.

The Portrait which faces verso of fifth leaf is frequently wanting. In a border round the portrait is this inscription "Patricivs Forbesivs a Coirse. Episcopvs Aberdonensis et Consiliarius Regivs"; underneath are four Latin verses. It is signed "R G Sculp."

This work appears to have been edited by David Lindsay, Parson of Belhelvie, but Dr. John Forbes of Corse is also said to have superintended its production. Both editors contributed to the collection, which includes Sermons, Orations, Letters, and Verses in English and Latin by the following: —King James VI., Abp. Spotswood, Bishops Guthrie, Sinsarffe, Maxwell, Bellenden, Lindsay, and Wishart; Doctors Arthur Johnston, William Johnston, Robert Baron, Alexander Scrogie, William Guild, James Sibbald, Alexander Ross, Patrick Panter, William Lesly, and William Gordon; Professors John Lundie, John Seton, David Leech, John Armour, Alexander Garden, and John Rae; Sir Alexander Cumming, Messrs. Robert Gordon of Straloch, James Sandilands, Andrew Ramsay, Robert Magnus, Ninian Campbell, Robert Watson, David Wedderburne, William Wallace, Robert Downie, Alexander Garden, Advocate, Thomas Wallace, John Hamilton, William Lauder, Patrick Jamison, James Gordon, John Kemp, James Keith, George Robertson, John Taylor, Alexander Downie, Patrick Maitland, William Wishart, Thomas Mitchell, Alexander Whyte, John Johnston, and Edward Raban.

On pages 428-429, is printed "Raban's Regrate, for the present losse of his very good Lord, Patron, and Master, Patrick Forbes, Bishop of Aberdene," signed "Edward Raban, Master Printer, The first in Aberdene."

* Not in all copies. At one time I was inclined to think that this woodcut was struck by Raban and his successors only on copies of the different works intended for King's College Library, Aberdeen; but as these impressions are to be found in nearly every large library, it would necessarily imply a carelessness or dishonesty on the part of the former custodians, which I cannot imagine to be possible.

This work was reprinted by the Spottiswoode Society in 1845, under the editorship of Mr. Charles Farquhar Shand, Advocate.

FORBES, PATRICK. Sermons by Patrick Forbes,
Bishop of Aberdeen.

4°. Given in Watt's "Bibliotheca Britannica," but I think it is very doubtful if such a book ever existed. Most likely the "Funerals" has been mistaken by some sale cataloguer for a volume of sermons by this Prelate.

On the 20th July, 1636, the Town Council of Aberdeen "ordaines Walter Robertsoun, dean of gild, to deburse feftie pundis money to Maister David Wedderburne, maister of the grammer schoole, for his paynes in drawing wp of new vocables for the weill and benefite of the young schollares within the said grammer schooll, whilk soume salbe allowit to the said dean of gild in his compts." [Extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Aberdeen, 1625-1642, p. 99.]

An entry in the Accounts of the Burgh of Aberdeen for 1635-36, "To Mr. David Wedderburne, according to the counsels warrand, 50 lib.," doubtless refers to the sum Wedderburne was to receive for the "Vocables." See Dr. Joseph Robertson's Memoir of Wedderburne, "Collections for a History of the Shires of Aberdeen and Banff," p. 63.

A. D. Morice, Esq., Aberdeen.

The following particulars in connection with the publication of the four last-named books are worthy of mention.

The Covenanting party sent Commissioners to Aberdeen to urge upon the inhabitants the signing of the Covenant. Among the Commissioners were the Earl of Montrose, Lord Cupar, Sir Thomas Burnet of Leys, the Master of Forbes, and three Ministers, Henderson, Dickson, and Cant. They arrived on Friday, 20th July, 1638, and upon the evening of the same day the Aberdeen Doctors sent their fourteen demands to the three Ministers, and requested answers. The signatories were the six Doctors, Forbes, Barron, Leslie, Ross, Scroggie, and Sibbald. The demands were also signed by Doctor William Guild, but he afterwards withdrew, and his name does not appear in any of the printed papers. The following evening, Saturday, 21st July, the three Ministers sent an answer to the demands, and requested permission to preach in the Churches on the following day. This was refused, but they preached in Earl Marischal's "cloiss" in the Castlegate. By Tuesday, 24th July, the Doctors had their replies to the answers ready for the press, but delayed publishing for a few days that the Ministers might revise their papers. No alteration was made, and the replies were printed.

About the beginning of August the Commissioners left Aberdeen, but Henderson and Dickson remained in the neighbourhood to continue the controversy. While the guests of Sir Thomas Burnet, at Muchalls, they composed an answer to the Doctors' replies, which was printed in the middle of August, 1638. Two editions of the "Answeres" were printed at Aberdeen in that year. The Aberdeen Doctors replied to the "Answeres" by the publication, in September, 1638, of "Duplies," which closed the controversy.

Later in the same year the three books were twice reprinted in Edinburgh, with a declaration prefixed from the Marquis of Hamilton. One of these editions has on the titlepage, "Edinburgh, Printed by Robert Young, Anno 1638," the other, "Printed by His Majesties Printer for Scotland. Anno 1638."

In 1662, shortly after the re-establishment of Episcopacy, the "General Demands, &c." were reprinted at Aberdeen by John Forbes, who again in 1663 issued the work with a new titlepage. I have seen reference made to an edition printed at Aberdeen in 1683, but I have never met with a copy.

The above is a conjectural restoration of the Titlepage of this work. The only trace of it that I can find is the following account given by Spalding:—"In this moneth of December, [1642] there cam out ane paper set out be Mr. David Lyndsay, persone of Balhelvie, callit Scotlandis Halleluiah, printed by Raban at Abirdene, thocht to be better said nor it had stuff or good mater, at whiche I thocht not worthie to tak panes vpone for inserting it in this place, albeit it is lying besyd my self in print." ROW, JOHN. Hebrew Dictionary. 1643.

An edition of Row's Vocabularium Hebraicum may have been published prior to that printed at Glasgow in 1644, but I have not seen a copy. The following order of the Town Council of Aberdeen, I think, is prospective, and refers to that book, which was not published until the following year:— “20 September, 1643. The said day, the counsell, considering the paines takin be Mr John Row in teaching the Hebrew tongue; and for setting furth ane Hebrew Dictionar, and dedicating the same to the counsell, ordaines Thomas Burnet, thesaurar, to deliuer to the said Mr

 John Row, for his paines, four hundreth merkis, Scots money. . . .”
 [Extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Aberdeen, 1643-1747, p. 9.]

SCOOLE ACTIS. Scoole Actis and Lawes.

Aberdene, Printed by Edward Raban, 1643.

We learn that the above was printed from the following order of the Aberdeen Town Council:—“15 March, 1643. The quhilk day the provest, baillies, and counsell, . . . thinks it expedient that the scoole lawes drawn vp be sight and advyse of Thomas Mortimer, baillie, D. Dune, Mr Andro Cant, Mr. Johne Oswald, and Mr. John Row, ministers of Aberdeine, Mr William Moir, Mr David Wedderburne, be printed with all convenient diligence possible to the effect above mentionat, and Walter Cochran, dean of gild, is ordanit to pay for the printing thair of, quhilk sall be allowit to him in his comptis.” [Extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Aberdeen, 1643-1747, p. 3.]

The payment is noted in the Town's Accounts for 1642-3 as follows:—
 “To Eduard Raben, for prenting half a rime of the scooll actis and lawes, 5 lib.; and at the setting of the pres, givin him and his men to drink, 6s. 8d., 5 lib. 6s. 8d.” [Miscellany of the Spalding Club, Vol. V., p. 106.]

4°. Eight pages. Imperfect, but unique so far as I can ascertain. From an edition in New College, Edinburgh, "Printed by Evan Tyler, 1643," I have been able to give the probable collation. The Aberdeen copy contains only the Title, and Orders of the Assembly, &c., anent subscribing the Covenant on seven pages. The Edinburgh edition is the same, and is followed by B 1—3², pp. 1-6, A Solemne League And Covenant, then seven leaves for the signatures, with "The Subscribers Of The | League And Covenant, |" at top of each page. HORN BOOK. [A Paternoster, or Abecedarium.]

Printed in Aberdene, by E. Raban.

12°. Black Letter. Four leaves printed on one side of the page only.
 Each page commences with the Alphabet in Upper and Lower case type, followed on two of the pages by three lines of spelling, viz:—

ab	eb	ib	ob	ub
ac	.	.	.	.
ad	.	.	.	.

Then "In the Name of God the Father, &c.," then "Our Father, &c." Each page in different Black Letter type. At foot of last page "Printed in Aberdene, by E. Raban." No date, but from appearance and style I should say early xvii. Century, or about 1622. The pages never having been divided, it is as a small folio sheet 11'2 in. $\times$ 7'3 in.

For the above description of this very great rarity I am indebted to the Right Hon. The Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, who very kindly had his beautiful copy photographed for me.

A copy of this Horn Book is entered in the Sale Catalogue of Dr. David Laing's Library, Part I., No. 1540. Its history is a remarkable one, for it is said on good authority to have been taken out of a copy of Boetius, to which it had formed a fly-leaf. Dr. Laing purchased it at the sale of the late Andrew Jervise's Library in 1878, for the sum of 3s., and at the sale of Laing's books in 1879 it realised £15. A third copy was in Pearson's Catalogue, in June, 1883, priced £12 10s.

This entry is a perplexing one, for we find in the Council Register of Aberdeen, that on the Ninth of January, 1650, "the provost, baillies, and counsell, receavit and admittit James Browne, lawfull sone to Mr Wm. Browne, minister at Invernochtie, printer of this brughe, in place of Edward Raban, during the counsellis pleasur allanerlie, and to the lyk casualtie and benefeit off the toune, as the said Edward Raban haid the tyme bygane." MESSAGE. Message | Sent from the | King of Scots, | And the | Duke of York's | Court in Flanders; | To the Lord Douglas, and Collonel | Brown; To be communicated to the rest of the Nobility | and Gentry in the Scottish Nation. | With | Proposals and Overtures, for the | composing of all Differences, the submitting to Counsel, and | the preventing of a Universal Desolation. |

Printed at Aberdeen, by David Stranghan; | And Translated out of the Original, for general satisfaction. |

4°. Four leaves, or, pp. 8. Signed C. Culpepper, dated from Brussels, Novemb. 6. 1659. The copy examined was formerly in the Library of George Chalmers, who marks it Rare and Curious. There is also a copy in the University Library, Edinburgh. I am inclined to think that this is printed by Brown under a feigned name, but unfortunately there is very little about the tract to enable one to form a very decided opinion.

I have copied the above from Lowndes' Bibliographer's Manual (Bohn's Edition), p. 418, but I think it probable that the London reprint of 1660 has been mistaken for an Aberdeen edition of that year. Mr. Hazlitt in his Handbook to Popular and Dramatic Literature, p. 95, has a similar entry.

The last two works were printed by command of the Town Council of Aberdeen, as we learn from an entry in the Council Register, dated 15th August, 1660:—"The said day, the counsell appoints the sermons prechit in the churches of this brughe be Mr John Paterson, minister of this brughe, and Mr John Mengzes, professor of divinitie, vpon the day of last, for the Kings Majesties happie restauration to the just government of his dominions, to be put to the presse and printit with all convenient dilligence, wpon the charges of the tounne, and appoints the ministers to be aquaint for puting the saids sermons in order for the forsaid effect; as also that the forme and maner of the solemnitie be the inhabitants of this burgh the said day for the forsaid effect, be siclyk put to the press, and printit vpon the tounes charges, and that the samen be put in good order therfor." [Extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Aberdeen, 1643-1747, p. 191.]

The "forme and maner of the solemnitie" I have not yet seen. It was probably a broadsheet.

Forbes was recompensed for his efforts, as we see by the following order of the Town's authorities:—"18 March, 1663. Aberdene, | Printed by John Forbes, Anno Dom. 1663. |

4°. General Title, verso blank, followed by a leaf (recto blank) with woodcut of Royal Arms on verso, A—Tt, two leaves each, besides four leaves, unnumbered, between I and K, bearing on recto of 1st leaf:—“Imprinted at Edinburgh by Robert | Young, Printer to the Kings | most excellent Maiestie. | Cum Privilegio. | Anno. 1638. | And re-printed at Aberdene, | by John Forbes, Anno 1663. | ” Royal Arms on verso. The Marquis of Hamilton's Declaration occupies the remaining three leaves. That portion of the book marked A—Tt is exactly the same as described under 1662, and the first Titlepage, or A 1, bears that date.

In the synod Register of Aberdeen, under date Wednesday, 28th October, 1663, the following interesting entry occurs relating to this edition:—“The said day, it is recomendit be the bishope to haill bretherine of the synod, that they buy from Johne Forbes, stationer, the queries, replies, and duplyes of the doctoris of Aberdene and professors of divinitie ther at the pryce of ffyfteene shillingis Scottis money the peece ; as also, it is thocht fitt that the declinator of the bishopes at the pretended Assemblie in Glasgow be printed and bought by the haill bretherine of the synode." [Selections from the Ecclesiastical Registers of Aberdeen, p. 270.]

On the 20th October, 1666, it was found that some of the Ministers had not complied with this Act, at least so far as concerned the payment of the books. The synod ordered :—"that all ministeris who haue not givin satisfactiōe to Johne Forbes, stationer, for these bookis of the queries, replies and duplyes of the doctors of Aberdene, conforme to former actis made theranent, shall pay in the same to the respective moderators at the first or nixt meiting of ther exerceises ; and the moderators ar ordained to take ane nott of the deficientis, and represent the samyn to the lord bishope, within ten weekis after the dait heirof, that they may be censured accordinglie, and course takin for satisfieing the said Johne, who hes lyn out thir severall yeiris bygane off satisfactiōe for printing these bukis at ane great charge." The expense of printing this work was borne by the Town of Aberdeen, but in return, the Magistrates, for the time being, became possessors of the stock, which was sold on behalf of the City. The minute of fifteenth January, 1668, gives the details of the transaction as follows:—"The said day, the magistrats proposcing to the councill that Mr John Menzies, professor of divinitie in this burgh, did resolve to

This work has been usually catalogued as printed at Aberdeen by John Forbes, Younger, but after a careful examination of the printing, and a comparison with Forbes's work of that date, I have come to the conclusion that it is a foreign production. My opinion has been formed without reference to the Author's statement in the Advertisement in which he says :—"This short Reply to Mr. Menzeis greater Book, was offered to the Press at Aberdene within a moneth after it first appeared ; but the Stationer being inhibited by Publick Authority (and that as is thought at M. Menzeis desire) I was forced first to make it to be transcribed, and then fitted for abroad, where it is not easie to us, to have any thing well Printed or returned in hast." An inhibition would not have had great weight with Forbes had he seen his way to escape detection. The book is a very rare one, and for a long time I was unable to find a copy, perhaps owing to its being an anonymous work. The Author's name I have not discovered, but we learn from the book that it could not have been Dempster, who did not live to see the "Papismus Lucifugus" published. He is said to have died a twelvemonth before Menzies printed his account of the controversy.

A 1^r Title, within a woodcut border, A 1² Arms of the City of Aberdeen, A 2—3, Dedication to the Provost, Magistrates, and Councillors of Aberdeen, signed “Philopolis.” This Dedication is not in Hart’s edition, the writer being Alexander Skene of Newtyle, at whose instance the tract was reprinted. A 4 Barclay’s Dedication to Sir Robert Keith of Benholme, B—D Callirhoe. It was again reprinted at Aberdeen by Burnett and Rettie in 1799, in Duodecimo, with Verses at the end signed “A Water-Drinker.”

The following Act of Council of the Burgh of Aberdeen relates to the reprint of 1670:—“9 March, 1670. The said day, anent the petitione given in to the counsell by Master Alexander Skeene of Newtyll, late baillie of the said brughe, showing that considdering everie bleessing bestowit be God on any place should be improvin for the publict good, and seing that medicinall wall at the Womanhill, commonly called the Wall of Spae, had been much neglectit thes severall yeires bygone, since the same wes stopit by the violent torrent of wateris which overturned it, after the same had been cairfullie buildit by ane inhabitant of this brughe, who had good prooff in his owne persone in cureing him of the stone, in memorie wherof he translated the same in ane more hansome way, with the portrature of sex apostles raisit on each side of ane long hewin stone, with which ornaments it had been sett forth for the notable vertues with which thes wateris ware indued, in heiling such varietie of diseases, as ane printed book, set out by Doctor William Barklay in the year 1615, did demonstrat; and now the said spring appeiring in its wonted place, and the wateris found to be of the same qualitie, according to the said doctor his marks and prescryvit meines of tryall, and it being found that the said wall had not beene onlie ane former great bleessing, but evin many at this tyme had felt the good effectis therof in cureing the gravill, and stone in the kidnes and blader, the collicks in the stomach, when so violent that nothing else could, and also despirat lyke hydropsies; therfor desyreing the counsell that they wold be pleisit to permitt him to caus rebuild the said wall, in as comlie ane way as befor it had been, without any charge to them or the toune, and which being done, that they wold take it as ther owne and preserve and manteine it in tyme comeing; and also that thay wold caus reprint the said Doctor Barclayes book, which wold be about ane sheet of paper, with such testimonies as ther present phisitianes should, at ther desyre, from thair knowledge and experience annex, wherby seeklie strangeris knowing of such ane free offer of health might make the more frequent resort to this brughe, and be partakeris of the same goodnes of God with others, as in the petitione wes contenit." [Extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Aberdeen, 1643-1747, p. 264.]

The extreme rarity of the original edition of this treatise is sufficient excuse for introducing a more accurate transcript of the Titlepage than has hitherto appeared, taken from the copy in the British Museum:—

Callirhoe, | The Nymph | Of Aberdene, | Resvscitat | By | William Barclay | M. of Art, and Doctor of | Physicke. | What diseases may be cured by drinking of the Well | at Aberdene, and what is the true vse thereof. | Printed by Andro Hart, | Anno Dom. 1615. |

8°. A, eight leaves + B, four leaves, the last leaf of B is blank. The Museum copy has bound up with it a copy in MS. of another of Barclay's Tracts—"The Nature and Effects of the new-found Well at Kinghorne: Declared by William Barclay, Master of Artes and Doctour of Physicke, and written in a Letter to my Lord the Earle of Dumfermeling, and Chancellor of Scotland. Edinburgh Printed by Andro Hart. Anno Domini 1618." I may here state that Barclay's "Apobaterium, or Last Farewell to Aberdene," which Dr. Joseph Robertson mentions in the "Book of Bon-Accord," but which he had not seen, is in the Bodleian Library, Oxford. It does not appear to have been a separate publication, but to have formed a portion of a volume of Poems by Barclay. The copy examined is very imperfect, but enough remains to warrant our ascribing the printing to Andro Hart.

MITCHELL, WILLIAM. A Dialogue betwixt a Quaker, and a Stable Christian.

Aberdene, [?] 1670.

We are informed by Robert Barclay's "Truth cleared of Calumnies" that the above-named book was "printed at Aberdeen, and upon good ground judged to be writ by William Mitchell, a Preacher neer by it, or at least that he had the Chiefe hand in it." I have searched diligently for this work, but it has not been my good fortune yet to meet with it, perhaps owing to its being an anonymous book.

The pages are not numbered. I believe this to be unique, and perhaps the smallest book ever printed in Aberdeen. That it has survived, even in a single example, is marvellous, for its attractiveness to young and old is apparent from the copy examined, which bears the marks of many perusals, and several owners, but is in wonderfully good preservation. The typography is clear and very creditable to Forbes.

It is extremely probable that the following extract from the Council Register of Aberdeen refers to this publication. It confirms my belief that Forbes printed for both parties at this unhappy period :—" 1 March, 1676. The said day, Gilbert Black, baillie holding out to the counsell that he being informed that John Forbes, printer, wes printing ane book put out by the Quakers, he hade seasit wpon ane part therof, and hade takine the same from the printer, and the counsell approveit of his acting therin, and recomends to George Leslie, baillie to acquaint the bishope therewith for his advice theranent." James Walker, Esq., Aberdeen.

Since writing the above, I have had an opportunity of examining a copy of the 1682 Cantus belonging to Mr. Morice, and after comparing it with Mr. Walker's copy, I have arrived at the conclusion that there were two distinct issues of titlepages bearing that date. The engraved titlepage is supplied in facsimile in Mr. Morice's copy, but the second titlepage, which is an original, is quite different in the setting from the other copy, and in many places types of another fount have been used. On turning to the verso I find that the initials on either side of the Royal Arms in Mr. Morice's copy are the same Gothic letters as in the General Demands of 1663, but in Mr. Walker's copy they are plain Roman capitals. The arrangement of the first two lines of the verses to the King is also changed. I am disposed to think that Mr. Morice's copy is the earlier of the two for the following reason. The Gothic initials C. R. have every appearance of being part of the woodblock of the Royal Arms, but upon the King's death in 1685, they would be cut out and changed for those of the reigning monarch. I cannot instance an example of this large block with the initials of King James II., but in Mackaile's "Terræ Prodromus, 1691," the same woodcut is used, and the initials W. R. in plain Roman capitals take the place of the Gothic letters. The erasure of the C has been imperfectly performed, so that in Mr. Walker's Cantus the Gothic letter is faintly visible. The new initials and the verses appear to be a separate printing from the woodcut. I think we must assign a date later than 1684 to the titlepage in Mr. Walker's copy, although I have no reason to doubt that the rest of the work was printed in 1682. It is possible that Forbes may have run short of titlepages, and found it necessary to reprint in order to work off the remainder of the edition; but as the references to King Charles II. in the preface prevented him from changing the date, he adopted the honest course of reproducing his title with the old date, in place of manufacturing a fourth edition.

4^o. A, four leaves, B, two leaves. A 1^r has only a large capital A in the centre, A 1² blank, A 2—B 2, pp. 1-10, Some Queries. No date, place, or printer's name, but I have no hesitation in ascribing this tract to John Forbes's press. It was probably printed shortly after Bishop Haliburton's translation to the See of Aberdeen in 1682. There is no titlepage. At the end it is stated that "These were delivered to the late Bishop of Aberdeen, in . . . 1674 . . . And now this present Bishop, his successour, and his Clergie being intending a new procedure . . . we have published these Queries."

4°. A—D in fours + E, two leaves + F—H 2 in fours. A 1^r Title, A 1² Woodcut of the Aberdeen Arms, with verses in praise of the City, A 2, pp. 3-4, Dedication to Capt. John Tyler of Leith, A 3—C 4, pp. 5-24, An Introduction to the Tyde-Table, D 1—E 2, pp. 25-36, Everlasting Tyde-Tables, F 1—G 3^r, pp. 37-49, A Mathematicall Dialogue betwixt James Paterson, Mathematician at Edinburgh, and Iohn Forbes, Printer to Aberdeen, & Φιλομαθ, G 3^r—H 2^r, pp. 49-[55] (pp. 54-55 not numbered), Epistle to the Reader, H 2² is blank. The Epistle ends with verses by Forbes, accusing Paterson of lack of wisdom, and of his errors as “most unfit for Yearly Almanacks.” It concludes thus :—

“Your Almanacks by Mine, I pray to mend,

I’le say no more, I thinke it tyme to end.

F I I 6 N 8 I 3 S quod Forbes.

God Save The King.”

I have not seen the first edition of the Mariner’s Everlasting Almanack, and can find no reference to the date of its issue in the second edition. A copy of the second edition with the date 1685 on the titlepage, but with the colophon as above dated 1683, is in the British Museum.

I suspect that this is the pamphlet referred to in the following Act of the Town Council of Aberdeen, dated 1st August, 1683 :—“The said day, the councell understanding that John Forbes, printer, had printed ane pamphlet relating to medicine, reflecting upon some phisicians and chirurgeons in the said brughe, in some pairt therof, as they conceaved ; therfor ordains the said printer to be conveynit and rebokved as having done the same without any authoritie, and withall that in tyme comeing that he print no pamphlets or books without the magistrats and councells authoritie therto, and inspection takin therof.” [Extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Aberdeen, 1643-1747, p. 303.]

The author of the Memorials and Survey was Alexander Skene of

was the Rev. John Barclay, Parson of Cruden.

The Succinct Survey was reprinted at Aberdeen for Peter Buchan in the year 1833, and the complete work was reproduced in facsimile, at least so far as titlepages and woodcuts, in 1867, by William Blackwood and Sons, Edinburgh. A leaf inserted between pages 16 and 17, states:—"This little book originally printed at Aberdeen in 1685, is now (1867) reprinted, to the extent of fifty copies, at the expense of John Inglis Chalmers of Aldbar."

BURGER'S OATH. [Woodcut of the Arms of the City of Aberdeen.] Follows the Burgers Oath, to be sworn by | all Burgesses of Gild, and Craftsmen of | the Burgh of Aberdeen the time of their Admission. | . . .

F°. Broadsheet, 12 × 7½ in. Without date, place, or printer's name. In the oath, allegiance is promised to Queen Anne, which fixes the date of printing between 1702 and 1714. From the style of the typography I am inclined to assign it to John Forbes, who died in 1704.

Alexander Walker, Esq., Aberdeen.

FORBES, ALEXANDER. De Rota Arithmetica.

I have no certainty that this treatise was printed in Aberdeen, but there is good reason to think that Forbes employed his brother, if the work was published in this country. The only mention of it that I have met with is the following:—"Mr. Alexander Forbes, son to John Forbes, a merchant and stationer in Aberdeen, wrote a little tract De Rota Arithmetica, dedicate to the Valiant Prince James, Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth." [Catalogue of Scottish Writers, p. 124.]

F°. Broadsheet. Without date, place, or printer's name. I am very doubtful if this is printed in Aberdeen, and include it here chiefly on account of its reference to Forbes.

Britain, without any great or appa- | rent Error. | By a Well-Wisher of the Mathematicks. | [Woodcut of Arms of the City of Aberdeen.]

Aberdeen | Printed by James Nicol Printer to the |
Town and University. |

12°. Eight leaves. 1st Title, 1st Computation of Time, 2nd Eclipses, Moveable Feasts and Terms, &c., 2nd Tide Table, 3rd—7th, pp. [9], Astronomical Notes for each month, Forecasts of the Weather, and Fairs during the month, 7th Advertisements, 8th—2nd Verses of four lines on each month of the year, with colophon “God Save the King, | F I I 7 N I I 6 S.”

The Advertisements commence with a notice of a Fair called St. Margaret's Fair, at Fochabers, “with a Horse Race on the 29 of May for a piece of Plate to the value of an Hundred merks. Horses of all Syzes being welcome to run, after five days kept in Fochabers.” The next paragraph gives us an idea of the time of the year when the Almanac went to press, and may account for the absence of any notice of the Rebellion in the Chronological Remarks on the verso of the titlepage. It runs as follows:—“Notwithstanding many former Advertisements to all concerned with Fair and Mercats, yet there is but few regarded the same. It's hoped all concerned therein will strive to prevent their own loss. Any who have New or Old Fairs to Insert in the Almanack may send them in against the first of July (Cum Beneficio).”

This is followed by an Advertisement, which has been already noticed, of “The Twelve Tunes used to be sung in the Church of Scotland,” and then a singular Advertisement of sundry quack medicines, which is sufficiently curious to warrant my quoting it in full:—“Also, Daffy's Original and Famous Elixir Salutis, the Choice Drink of Health, or Health-bringing-Drink: Being a Famous Cordial Drink, found out by the Providence of the Almighty, and (for above Fifty Years) Experienced by himself and Diverse Persons whose Names are at most of their desires Insert in the Bills of Directions given with each bottle, The price of each bottle 3 shillings sterling. Also, Stoughton's Elixir Magnum that rare Cordial for the Stomach with Directions, 1 shilling sterling per bottle. Also the Queen of Hungary's Water, and White Powder, to be sold at the foresaid place.” The Advertisements conclude with a “Notice to all Noblemen, Gentlemen, Lawyers, Merchants, Masters of Ships, and Others, that I furnish you, with all sorts of Stamp Parchments and Paper, Debenters of all Syzes, and Bills of Loadings, all at the Government Rate, when ye will be waited on at my foresaid dwelling House and Shop.”

The "Monethly Observations," although in some respects inferior to the poetical effusions in Raban's first Almanac, yet are worth preserving on account of some quaint sayings which the rhymer has introduced into some of the verses.

JANUARY.

I ope' the Gate to let the New Year in,
The Weathers now too cold to Card or spin.
Yet some men at the Cards so long dare play.
Till they have Carded all they have away.

FEBRUARY.

If Candlemass Day be clear and fair,
The half of Winter is to come and mair,
Sleet, snow, and Winds this Month begins & ends,
In medio virtus est, therefore no storm offends.

MARCH.

A blustering March through nine bul-hides will blow,
For this our old Good-dames, would have us know
But with their Rule this Year will scarce accord,
Since better weather March will now afford.

APRIL.

When April weeps, then May will chirp and sing,
For April showsr, maketh May flowrs to spring,
And such a Moneth I think this Month will be,
The truth whereof its time must let us see.

MAY.

Come enter in thou pleasant Moneth of May,
What is it for thy self that thou canst say,
If April hath been kind and wept for thee,
We wish the fruits of that moneths tears to see.

JUNE.

June is a pleasant Moneth as well as May,
Good husbands now will think of making Hay,
But let them make it while the Sun doth shine,
And if a showr doth come, let none repine.

JULY.

Prepare your selves, Harvest cometh on,
The Fields the staff we all rely upon,
For King and People from the field are fed,
And poor folks thence expect their welcome bread.

AUGUST.

GOD rules the Stars of Heaven, and they rule so,
 As all men find their influence here below,
 It's wondrous hot and dry, the Stars foretell
 That it will make our Harvest to excel.

SEPTEMBER.

September is a Moneth when equal day
 And night throughout the World beareth sway,
 But at the equal length it holds not long,
 For as the one grows short, the other groweth strong.

OCTOBER.

October is a Moneth deserving praise,
 Then spring your Saffron flowrs the golden gays:
 But if too cold the weather chance to be,
 A slender Crop that year we use to see.

NOVEMBER.

This Moneth November is both raw and cold.
 And looks like Winter, and is like to hold:
 Darkned he is with clouds like mists of Night,
 Oft weeping, wanting Phœbus glittering light.

DECEMBER.

Now cold December is come in,
 The Poor Mans back is cloathed thin.
 Then feed and cloath him as you may,
 The Lord it threefold will repay.

At the foot of the ninth page there is this rhyming caution to buyers and sellers of Almanacs, relative to the numerous prints issued professing to be Aberdeen Almanacs, but printed in Edinburgh, Leith, Glasgow, &c. :—

My Loving Countrey Men, and brave Chapmen all,
 For Almanacks when you do always call,
 Trust none to be set forth at Aberdeen,
 But where their Loyal Arms are to be seen :
 For they are still accounted to be best,
 And for your sakes shall be the better drest.

The allusion to the fate of old Almanacs, in the verses which conclude the sheet, will be read with interest by those who have made unavailing search for these interesting records of Time :—

Go forth my Book, for now my work is done,
 From whence throughout the Nation thou must run,
 Let not thy various entertainments fright thee ;
 If one respect, another he will slight thee :
 Where thou far'st best, expect this cruel Fate,
 One bare Year's Service puts thee out of Date.
 Then to what use, thy tortured Carcase may
 Be put unto, truly I dare not say ;
 It matters not what is thy shame or pain,
 Thou Phoenix like, next Year reviv'st again.
 Since Time (dear Friends) doth run away so fast,
 Which cannot be recall'd when once its past ;
 By hours, by days, by months and years we see
 Time's measured, but posts insensiblie,
 Saint Augustine could never Time desyne,
 No Mortal can their fatal Hour decline.
 Many shall see this Year begun, remember,
 Who'll never see the last day of December,
 God help us so to spend our Time, that we
 May ne'r at last be terrifi'd to die.

TEMPUS Edax Rerum, &c.

Thus ends the Year, and merry may you be,
 He's wise who knows the other Year to see.

imprint have unfortunately been cut away.

The events prophesied in the Poetical Conclusion required, certainly, no great sagacity to foretell them; but for their quaintness and humour
the lines are well worth quoting:—

From Phœbus-Hall our Prints declare,
That th' Earth is round, and no ways square,
That Truth will be with Rogues as rare
As honesty:
That days will be some foul, some fair,
promiscuously.

By Luna's Packet we are told,
That Brass will more abound than Gold ;
The Weather sometimes hot or cold,
 or freezing strong ;
That severall People will grow Old,
 if they live long.

From Mercury our Mercuries,
Prognosticate of Thefts and Lies;
Of Privateers and Stolen Cheese,
 and borrow'd money,
Of High Way-men and stingless bees,
 which makes not honey.

From Mars his Court we have Advice,
That some will be so stuff'd with Spice,
That they will squabble in a Trice
and fight for Blood ;
As did of Old the Frogs and Mice,
but peace is good.

From Jupiter we've Information,
That Hoops will sell well in this Nation,
Since Farthingales, that modest Fashion
 are much in use ;
That Neptune will get an Invasion
 from Eolus.

From Venus's Mount our latest mails,
Fortell of Spacious Farthingales,
Of Ships equip'd with lovely Sails;
of civil Robbers;
Of Cawsey-hens and Nightingales,
and the Stock-Jobbers.

The freshest News we have from Saturn,
Say many Nymphs and marri'd Matron
Will wear an elevated Apron
for Propagation,
But Brandy will be dear as Saffron within this Nation.

The poetical "Conclusion for this Year 1722" is as follows:—

'Twixt Mercur and the Hilldown Tree,
 These following things a man may see :
 Two Noble Rivers there doth run,
 Adorn'd with Splendid Briggs of Stone ;
 One of one Arch without compare,
 The other of Seven, and very Fair,
 And yearly throughout every Arch,
 Cathedral Fish in Legions march,
 Long time these have the Fronteers been,
 Of the Antient Towns of ABERDEEN.
 For if these Briggs were quite away,
 They would be a Peninsula ;
 Bounded on East with Neptune's Fleet,
 With Braidhill, Block-house, Canno-sweet,
 With famous Town of antient Fittie,
 Where dwelleth women wise and wittie,
 On West with a large fertile Field,
 Which Parsneps, Turneps, Carrets yeeld ;
 With finest Cabbage, Sybows, Leeks,
 [Which women sell who wear the Breeks]
 Potato's, Beans, & cætera,
 Abound in this Peninsula,
 Wake, Wind, and Water-Mills these Towns,
 Do separate from Rustick Clowns :
 In midst of these there may be seen,
 The beauteous Towns of ABERDEEN ;
 Whose UNIVERSITIES discover
 Their Learning all the World over,
 Their Musick, stately Buildings, Bells,
 Their spacious Streets, and Suggared Wells,
 Which any may observe who will,
 'Twixt Tillidron and Ferrihill :
 Inverurie Battle and Harlaw,
 Did their Ancestors Valour shaw,

All which demonstrate in a World,
The Comeliness of BON-ACCORD.

*Thus fare ye well till the next Year,
When I'm your Guest, then make good Chear.*

last described, the first eight pages read down two-thirds of each column;
the remaining four read across. I Computation of Time, 2—8 Astronomical Notes, Weather Forecasts, and list of Fairs for each month, 9 Eclipses, Feasts, and Terms, with Latin Motto at foot, 10 Tide Table, 11 The usual Advertisements, with this advice added:—

What e'r you be, where e'r you dwell,
Bring Money when for these ye Call.

The Poetical "Conclusion for this Year 1723" commences on p. 11, and is concluded on the last page. The heading and imprint have both been cut away.

The Rhymed Prophecy with which the Almanac concludes is as follows:—

Strange Alterations will fall out this Year,
Fresh Water some will drink, for lack of Beer.
Others, who live Be-South and North the Line
Will tipple Tea and Rack instead of Wine.
Some will rejoice to hear anothers Gutts,
Others will long for Forreign Cocko-Nuts.

Eggs will be fresh when they are lately laid,
 And HER-NAIN-SELL, will wear the Tartain plaid.
 Some thousands will assemble in our Isles,
 But Master Fox will suffer for his Wyles.
 Improvements will be made in many parts ;
 And Burglary as well as other Arts.
 Fairs will be fraught, with Cut-purses & Horners ;
 With Moon-light-men with Horse-stealers & Sorners.
 Yet warry Bees, will still be gathering Honey ;
 Therefore let all take heed to hide their Money.
 A Dog shall on a Fidle sweetly play,
 And Woods and Hills, shall dance and run away,
 An ancient Nymph will haunt Saint Machars Kirk,
 Invisible, both when it's light or mirk :
 Yet so discreet, she'll speak to every one,
 Tho she allow her presence unto none :
 With every Temper she will Sympathize,
 She'll sing with singers, neize with them that neize.
 She'll mourn alowd with those that mourn or cry :
 This Creature doth portend some Prodigy.
 The Transilvanians say, that she wast wont,
 For to be heard in their Carpathian Mount.
 May peace and Truth, among us still abide.
 Good News at length will to all Nations ride.
 Through Feflis, Cambalu and Astracan,
 Through Peking, Agra, Mecha, Ispahan.
 Through Asia and Affrick ; around the Lake of Zaire ;
 Through Mixico, to Peru 'nd Dela-Maire.
 I'll not be positive, as great Jeriew,
 Least I should lie : No more this Year Adieu.

The twelfth page is wanting, as well as the heading and imprint, which have unfortunately been cut away.

The poetical "Conclusion for this Year 1724" is the latest that I have met with in the Aberdeen Almanacs, and although only a fragment, it is worth reprinting. It reads as follows:—

One Year doth come into anothers place,
Just as one Wave another Wave doth chase :
Time is an equal measureing of Motion,
According to a Succedaneous Notion :
Men reckon up their lives by days and Years,
He's happiest his End in mind who bears.
Our Breath (while here) doth like a Bellows go,
He reaps at last, who doth in Season sow :
But when our Lungs the Bellows of our breath,
Begin to fail, then soon approacheth Death :
Time past is gone, and will no more return,
And while we speak, we post into our Urn :

The rest is wanting.

A. D. Morice, Esq., Aberdeen.

The above and seven other Aberdeen Prognostications, dated from 1716-25, formerly belonged to the late Andrew Jervise, were sold at his sale, and resold to their present owner for the sum of six shillings and sixpence. The first Almanac in the collection is in book form, but the remaining seven had been cut into the several pages or divisions indicated by the lines, and pasted down upon blank sheets, giving them quite a fragmentary appearance. It was only when I chanced to come upon the mention of an Aberdeen Almanac for 1720, described as a broadsheet in the sale catalogue of Mr. Jervise's Library, that the idea occurred to me that these separate pieces might have once formed broadsheets. The suggestion was confirmed when, on removing them from the leaves on which they were mounted, I found that they joined exactly, almost without exception; only, as mentioned above, five of the Almanacs are without imprint, three of the proper complement of divisions are wanting, and all are without head line. They appear to have been placed in their late covers at a period possibly contemporary with the date of the latest of them. The collection is remarkable as being, so far as I am aware, the largest of these rarest of prints to be found in any one Library.

The copy examined, which was formerly in the Library of Marischal College, is bound along with another tract, and has this MS. note on the fly-leaf :—"The first of these Tracts was presented to Marischal College in 1840 by David Laing, Esq., Edinburgh. The second was found behind the Dial-plate of the Clock in taking down the Old College in May, 1840. At the end of it is a Catalogue in MS. of the Books belonging to James Morison, who was Provost of Aberdeen in 1744-1746 and 1752-1754."

It is this second tract that I have described above, and it is a curious fact that the copy thus singularly preserved should have belonged to the very person to whom the tract was dedicated. Both the tract and catalogue are much weather-stained, while through every leaf there is a jagged hole, an inch and a-half in diameter, made by the pinions to which the clock hands are attached. It would appear that in fitting up or repairing the clock at some period later than February, 1758,* a wedge of some kind had been required, and as probably this tract lay ready to hand, it had been ruthlessly used for the purpose. The Catalogue was printed in "Notes and Queries," 6th Series, Vol. VII., p. 444, along with a statement of the singular circumstances of its preservation.

It is curious to note that the source from which so many quoted the inaccurate title of this work is none other than the notorious John Bagford. I have examined his MS. Collections in the British Museum, and find it stated there exactly as Dr. Joseph Robertson gives it in the Book of Bon-Accord, p. 55.

* For the numerous descriptions of books in the University Library, Glasgow, I am indebted to John Young, Jr., Esq., Assistant Librarian there.

† The late Dr. Joseph Robertson left a large collection of valuable material, beautifully written, in three volumes, titled "Biographia Abredonensis." I am greatly indebted to Mrs. Robertson for permission to make use of her husband's writings on Aberdeen printing and authors.

See page 9. This was the work of Daniel Tilenus, born 4th Feb., 1563, at Goldberg, in Silesia; died at Paris, 1st August, 1633. He was Professor of Theology at Sedan. "Il adressa aux Écossais un discours dans lequel il avança que l'on avait fait un changement trop considérable dans la religion des Presbyteriens"—Biogr. Universelle, tome xlv. p. 52. This discourse was presented to the King of England, who ordered it to be printed, and invited the author to this country; but, being accused of heresy at London, he did not come. He was a voluminous writer, and an eloquent.

For the Yeere of God 1624, | Beeing Leape-Yeare |
Serving most fitlie for the whole Kingdome | of Scot-

Aberdene, | ¶ Imprinted by Edward Raban, | for
David Melvill, 1624. |

See page 15. From a tracing by Norval Clyne, Esq., Advocate, Aberdeen, made in 1841. The following extracts were also made by Mr. Clyne, being warning remarks on the character of the several seasons :—

WINTER.

This quarter causeth him to wake with an hungry Bellie, who slept securely in Summer: and him to sleepe full warmly who was busie in harvest. Therefore we sluggards, who have neglected the last Summer, let us not doe so the next.

SPRING.

Many tennants shall leave their habitations voyde to their greedie Landlords. Some stryfe amongst noblemen; and great losse unto cautioners and creditors, by their vaine-glorious and desperate debtors. Many shall be to seeke at the Tearmes of payment, and sundry take their leave without Farewell.

SUMMER.

Manie Robberies and much Piracie, will be committed in this quarter, by leude and dissolute persons, for whome mee thinkes I heare the Gallowes continuallie groaning.

God prevent the Witches.

HARVEST.

Also the diseases of this quarter are not a few, such as burning agues, hote Feavers, and paines at the Stomacke, but at this time, and for ever, I commit thee to the wholesome hand of God, and to the cure of the skilfull Physician. Where is he?

ALMANAC. A Prognostication, | For this yeare
of our Redemption 1625 : | Beeing the next after
Leape-year | Serving for the whole Kingdome of
Scot- | land, but most especiallie, and ac- | ding (sic)
to Rabans bound duetie, for the | Latitude and
Meridian of the | Honourable Citie of | Aberdene. |
[Arms of the City of Aberdeen, with initials E. R., one at each side.]

Imprinted at Aberdene, by Edward | Raban, for
David Melvill, 1625. |

See page 18. From a tracing made in 1841 by Norval Clyne, Esq., Advocate, Aberdeen. Mr. Clyne copied the Almanac in its entirety, and through his courtesy I am enabled to give some extracts.

The title is followed by “A briefe and just Computation of Tyme, &c.,” “The Common Notes, and mooveable Feasts, &c.,” and a statement of the division of the year into months, &c. In this last is the well-known quatrain :—

Thirtie dayes hath September,
April, June, and November :
Februarie hath twentie and eight alone
All the rest have thirtie dayes and one.

The four seasons of the year are next treated of, with verses applicable to each quarter :—

WINTER.

The Prince of Planets, to the lowest Line,
From his Meridian Course doth now decline ;
And Flora's faire and partie-colour'd Coat,
Now misregarded, is roll'd up to rot,
And in this cold sharpe season of the Yeare,
Plants, Herbs, and Trees unpleasant all appeare.
And grosse raw Rheums, phlegmaticall and colde
This Quarters constitution best unfold.

SPRING.

While Phœbus, Phlegon, and Pyrrhous plyes
His wing-hoov'd horses, to re-scall the skyes :
And up Heavens Hill hee by degrees them dryves,
Inferiour faded things again revyves.
Plants, Fruits and Flowrs, all Fosters of the Earth
Rebourgeon blythlie, and renew their birth.
This Season best (by Nature moist and hote)
In youthfull yeares and sanguine natures note.

SUMMER.

The Sunne now mounted to the highest staves,
And makes us shortest nights, and longest Dayes :
Whose neare-by verticall rebatted beame
Rypes, burns, and blasts the blades, with heat extreame.
The Plants are parch'd, the ground doth gagg, so drye,
Fish in the floods, Frogs in the fields doe frye.
Cholericke humours, & full strength, alwayes
The heate of Summers Season best displays.

HARVEST.

The Sunnes declyning course, and lower Gate,
Prepares the Harvest with a temperate heate.

Pomona's spoyl'd, and Ceres poll'd and shorne :
 The Meadows mowne, made balde, as they were borne.
 And now the Earth with increase doth restore,
 For Man and Beast whatere shee got before.
 Mens melancholicke humours, hote and drye,
 With weake olde age, the Harv'st and Fall descrye.

The Eclipses that fall within the year are then set forth, followed by "A Declaration of Casualties likely to fall out." In the latter the writer claims Pope Joanna as his "native country woman." The changes of the Moon in each month, with predictions on the weather, and "All the principall Faïres of sayre Scotland," occupy the remainder of the Prognostication, concluding with the address to the chapmen by the printer, which I have already given on a preceding page (18).

PSALMS. 1625.

See pp. 19 and 23. There is now lying before me an edition of the version of the Psalms by Sternhold and Hopkins, "together with the Tunes diligently revised and amended by the most expert Musicians in Aberdene," printed at Aberdeen by Raban in 1625.

Book of Bon-Accord, Joseph Robertson, p. 124.

The above extract places it almost beyond doubt that Raban printed an edition of the Psalms in 1625. The notes by me at page 19, and by Mr. Quaritch's Cataloguer at page 23, are consequently misleading.

I had written the above note before receiving confirmatory evidence from Mr. John Young, Jr., of Glasgow University Library.

The following collation Mr. Young made independently of anything that I had written; and, so far as can be seen, the copy (imperfect also) in the Bodleian described at pp. 30-31, is identical with the one collated by Mr. Young. It will be observed, however, that Mr. Young designates the Euing copy 24°, whereas the Bodleian was certainly 16°:—

"Tymme or Timme, Thomas, Minister," appears as a pretty voluminous author in Watt's Bibliotheca Britannica, where the present work is thus noticed:—"A Silver Watch-bell to waken all Estates from the drowsy sleep of Sin, &c. Lond. (without date) 8°." Besides the works noticed by Watt, may be mentioned "Gueuarra's Dispraise of the Courtier's Life, done out of French by Sir Francis Briant, Knt., with apt notes by T. Timme, Imp. by W. Norton, 1575." 18°. Black Letter, dedicated to John, Lord Russel.

From Mr. Euing's MS. Catalogue. But unfortunately the book is lost. Probably there was a colophon from which Mr. Euing could ascribe it to Raban. If the sheets are in eights or twelves this must be a fragment of a whole Bible, and not of the New Testament merely.

See page 76. "On the suggestion of my friend, Mr. George Chalmers, I give the following Poetical Tract a place in this collection: "A Godly Dream, &c. Aberdeen, Imprinted by E. Raban Laird of Letters, and are to be sold at his shop, at the end of the Broad gate 1644." There are two circumstances not a little remarkable of this publication. It was, as my friend Mr. Chalmers informs me, the first book printed at Aberdeen; and perhaps no printer or publisher, before or since, has assumed so strange and singular a title as Mr. Raban, who scruples not to style himself "Laird of Letters." This poem has been reprinted by Pinkerton. Pinkerton says the authoress was not the mother of Colvill the Poet. Ritson makes it clear that she was,—from Douglas's Peerage, p. 146. The First Edition was printed at Edinburgh, 1603."

The Astronomers say, That the Age of Man, is three score and twelue years, And, That Man is lyke but one whole year. For, you must take six years, for everie Moneth : As Ianuarie, or Februarie : And so of the rest. For, even as the year changeth, by the twelue Moneths, into twelue dyverse manners : So doeth Man change twelue tymes in his lyfe : By twelue Ages : And everie six tymes, six ; maketh thirtie six. And then Man is at the best, and the highest. And, twelue tymes six, maketh threescore, and twelue. And, this is the Age of Man. For, Hee is eyghteen years, Young : eyghteen years, Strong : eyghteen years, Wyse : and the other eyghteen years, Old." The rest of the page is taken up with a caution on the "Nyne Floods." 8² is filled with verses, which are continued half way down the next page:—

SOME CERTAIN CONVENIENT TYMES,

ANNO 1658.

Hee that marries all in haste ;
And then to rack doth go :
By knitting of himself too fast ;
Hee doth himself undo.

Wedding and Hanging the Destines dispatch ;
But Hanging seems to some the better match.

Poet and Pot differ but in a letter :
Which maks the Poet to loue the Pot the better.

The Barbar only lives by cutting hair,
And yet doth brag, that kings to him sit bare.
Me thinks hee should not boast and brag of it,
For hee must stand to beggars whil they sit.

The cheating hors-coper (that cunning mate)
 Doth with the Buyers thus equivocate,
 Claps on his hand, & swears he may not thryve
 If that his Gelding bee not under fyve.

Were some Women as little, as they are good ;
 A Peas-cod wold be them a gown & an hood.

Manie Women are toothless, that when they were young,
 Had both Teeth enough, and too much a Tongue.

* * * * *

But that their Tongues have worn their teeth away.
 Things that bee bitter, bitterer than gall,
 Physitians say, are always physicall.
 Then womens tongues if into powder beaten,
 And in a Potion, or a Pill bee eaten.
 Nothing more bitter is. I therefore muse,
 That womens tongues in Physik they ne'er use.
 Theirs manie men, who live unquiet lives,
 Wold spare that bitter member of their wives.
 Then prove them Doctor, use them in a pil,
 Things oft help sik mē that do sound men kil.

The Almanac concludes with a notice of "a most pure Minerall Well at Peterhead ; Good for all Diseases, if it bee taken, and used, by the advyce of anie Skilfull Physitian, &c.," followed by a caution against Popery.

GARDEN, JAMES, 1611-97 (Professor of Divinity in King's College). Funeral Sermon on Professor Henry Scougal, his predecessor, who died 13th June, 1678.

The chair was vacant for over two years.

From Gordon's MS. Lists.

At this time (June, 1678), Garden was Minister of Balmerino, in the Presbytery of Cupar. Gordon does not definitely say that the Sermon was printed in Aberdeen, still I should think this likely, as till 1676 Garden had been Minister of Maryculter.

He was Laird of Newtyle . . . He was Baillie for the first time, for the last time. In 1670 he is styled "Alexander Skene of Newtyle, late Baillie"—and evinced a philopoliteiacal inclination at that epocha.

ALMANAC. Gloria Deo in Excelsis | Good News from the Stars, 1711. | Or, Aberdeen's New | Prognostication | For the Year of Our Lord, 1711. | Being the Third after Bissextile or Leap-Year. | Calculated for the Latitude of the Famous City of Aberdeen, | having exactly 57 deg. 10 min, and may very well | serve for all the North part of Great Britain, | without any great or apparent Errour. | By a Well-wisher of the Mathematicks. | [Woodcut of Man with Globe.]

Aberdeen Printed, and Edinburgh Reprinted by | John Reid Junior, in Liberton's-wynd, 1711. |

8°. Eight leaves. In the absence of a genuine Aberdeen Prognostication of this date, the following particulars of this pirated reprint will be acceptable to readers. 1¹ Title, 1² Chronological Remarks, 2¹ Eclipses, 2² On the Seasons, 3—6 Prognostications for each Month, &c., 7¹ Tide Table, &c., 7² On the signs of the Zodiac, with a very curious woodcut, 8¹ Annual Rents, and Verses concluded on 8². The Verses are as follows :—

O! Lord, we pray it of thy Grace,
Let Britain flourish ay in Peace.
Expell these Dreadful Fumes of Wars,
Bind up our Breaches and our Jars.
Let Queen and People Thee attend,
And from the Mobbs do Us Defend.

So we conclude the Year with a few Lines in Verse.

Attend my Friends and you shall hear,
 What strange things shall fall out this Year ;
 A Mighty fight shall foughten be,
 Which many of your Eyes shall see,
 And many think it safer far,
 To look on than engage in War.
 The place as Constellations say,
 Is a plain Field beneath the Tay,
 The first Platoons on either side,
 Right boldly Battel will abide,
 But none of either shall return,
 Till they be brought unto their Urn.
 A Knight shall jump before his fall,
 And fright the Adverse General.
 But ah ! a Rogue with subtile Wheels
 Shall suddenly turn up his Heels.
 Two Myter'd Heads shall long contend,
 Their Monarch safely to defend,
 But he and they shall go to wrack,
 And be laid flat upon their back.
 King, Knights, and Men of meaner Rank,
 Shall all be buried in one stank,
 This Fight shall be surviv'd by none,
 But the Two Generals alone.
 The one insulting with great folly,
 The other vex'd with Maggie Colly,
 Yet ruminating in his Mind,
 To be revenged the next Campaign.
 A Salmond shall be caught in Don,
 Near Thirtie Foot beneath a Stone,
 A numerous Family shall be stifled,
 And their rich Habitation Riffled,
 Its plain in August by the Stars,
 This Tragedy will be in the Carss.
GOD Save the QUEEN.

I have been at pains to describe this Almanac at considerable length, because, with the exception of a short advertisement of certain articles sold in Edinburgh, I believe it to be a literal reprint of Nicol's Prognostication for the same year. In this respect it agrees with an Edinburgh edition of the Almanac for 1683, in the library of Mr. Chalmers of Westburn.

Mr. Chalmers also possesses a Prognostication for 1703, "Edinburgh Reprinted by John Reid, younger"; but, except the name, "Aberdeen's Almanack," it bears very little resemblance to the genuine prints.

Division 12 :—The Conclusion for this Year 1725.

I find, that by the Star-board Paw,
Of my familiar Friend JACK STRAW,
By Subterraneous fire, the Sea
In many parts burnt up shall be :
Which will an Embleme be of Styx,
Or Etna, when it plays it's tricks :
It shall at length be dry'd up quite,
Leaving some Ashes very white :
With which the Corps of thousands slain,
Shall be embalmed on the Main.

Many shall break their Mothers Bones,
A Pox on such unnatural Sons !
And some shall burn their Mother's Skin,
That longer Hair may grow therein,
And some her Intralls shall out-rive
And burn, to keep themselves alive.
In BRITAIN likewise this same Year,
Thousands of Men there shall appear,
Who never before did see this Isle,
But had been Neutral all this while :
(Sick sides will be in many places,
Before that they unvail their Faces)
Of language strange, yet we will find,
It understood by all Mankind,
Hereafter what these men will act,
I'll tell you when I tryst with JACK.

Many shall dye their hands in blood,
 This Year 'twixt Findhorn and the Tweed,
 And Maids to Agitations wedded,
 Shall have a SUB, to them preadded.
 Our Home-bred Jars will end per-force,
 E're Saturn thrice absolve his Course.
 I greet you well this Year my Friends,
 And thus my Almanack here ends.

 From sharp Pointed Weapons, and a Murthering Knife ;
 From the conspiracy of all wicked Knaves,
 From brawling Servans, and a crew of Slaves ;
 And from the Place where Wolves and Foxes be,
 Vertue and Goodness still deliver me.

From the Mercy of some Jaylors,
 And the Reproach they put on Taylors ;
 From High-way Men that Rob us,
 From Morsels that will choak us ;
 From Ranters and great Eaters,
 From Desemblers, and Cheaters ;
 From stinking Fish, and rotten Eggs,

PREFATORY NOTE.

IN issuing the first part of "The Aberdeen Printers," I embrace the opportunity of writing a few words of thanks to the large number of subscribers who replied to the Prospectus, and rendered possible the publication of the work.

Out of one hundred and twenty-eight titles of books given in this part, eighty-four have been examined by myself. They can be readily distinguished by the perpendicular bars which indicate the arrangement of the titlepages into lines. The Library in which these books are to be found is invariably given at the end of each entry. The entries in which bars do not occur are taken from Bibliographical Works, Library Catalogues, Sale Catalogues, or casual references in books, but in every case the authority for the title is acknowledged.

I shall always regret that it was out of my power to examine the large collection of "Rabans" in Dr. Laing's Library, and should this come under the notice of the present possessors of any of the books with the too frequent note, "Dr. David Laing's Sale Catalogue," I shall be obliged if they will communicate with me.

Any information regarding Aberdeen Printing or Printers will be gladly welcomed, and use will be made of such in the concluding part.

In order to avoid the continual recurrence of the terms recto and verso in the collations, I have used small "superior" figures placed to the right above the larger figures that indicate the leaf of the sheet or signature,

Thus—A 1^r = recto of A 1; A 1² = verso of A 1.

I reserve the acknowledgment of assistance from many kind friends until the conclusion of my labours.

NOTE.

I have great pleasure in intimating to the Subscribers that arrangements have been made for issuing a number of Facsimiles, illustrative of the Aberdeen Printers, and of their Works.

Through the great kindness and courtesy of the Earl of Crawford, who has placed his negative at my service, a Facsimile of the very rare Horn-Book described in this part will form one of the illustrations. An entry in the Council Register, with Raban's signature, will be re-produced by Photo-Lithography; and several interesting titlepages and woodcuts will be given by the same process.

NOTE.

WITH this part I conclude the description of books printed by Raban and his Successors within the period indicated at the outset.

An Appendix, containing notices of works heard of too late for insertion in their chronological order, will form a portion of the fourth and concluding part. Historical Sketches of the Printers and Indices will also be issued with the ~~last~~ part.

In order to facilitate reference in the meantime, and if possible to induce owners or custodians of large collections to communicate information, I have printed a separate hand-list of desiderata. None of the works mentioned in that list have been examined by me, and in some cases their existence is doubtful.

A copy of the list will be sent to any address on application ; and information, or the loan of books mentioned in it, will be gratefully welcomed.
